Budget revisions sail through town meeting

by Arlene Surprenant
Town Meeting wrapped up its business in little over an hour in stifling heat Monday as voters approved Town Manager Michael Caira's revised budget and named Jim Stewart Acting Town Moderator for the meeting.

In addition, petitioner Mark Nelson withdrew articles two and three from consideration when told, under a new state law, town land has to be sold through a competitive bid process. Nelson was seeking to purchase some parcels of land abutting his property.

There was little discussion as voters approved Caira's plan to cut $645,293 from various town departments to bring in a final $33,249,224 budget for fiscal 1991. In April, voters had approved a budget of $33,894,517. Caira explained he met throughout the summer with all department heads to come up with further reductions to bring the budget within the confines of Proposition 2 1/2. Finance Committee Chairman Neil Waisnor said while his board favored Caira's short term revisions because the numbers are now more precise, he predicted it would take a lot of work to address a long term solution for future fiscal problems.

One of the biggest cuts was sustained by the Wilmington School Department. School officials agreed to cut a total of $150,000 from their budget but warned they could not sustain more such cuts in the future. Supt. William Fay said the impact would be softened because officials were able to plan ahead and purchase supplies and materials with monies from the FY'90 budget. In addition, he said, there was a surplus in the special needs account and less unemployment costs since most teachers which were laid off in the spring have now found other jobs.

When one resident asked why the cuts were necessary, Caira defended the reduction saying other towns like Billerica and Andover are making deeper cuts in their school budgets in the wake of shortfalls in local aid. He said while only 23 percent of Wilmington's reductions are from the school department, over 70 percent are from the municipal side.

"The budget decisions were not made in a vacuum," he assured voters.

Other areas impacted by Caira's revisions were the fire and police departments, town boards like the planning board and the board of health, and the public buildings department and the Department of Public Works. Further layoffs on the town side were avoided by cutting the expense and operating accounts of these departments and through attrition. Caira said insurance costs were reduced through "tough" negotiations and bidding. The MWRA sewer assessment was reduced by $87,000, the Shawsheen Tech assessment was cut by $20,000, and the library budget had figures reworked but there was no change in the bottom line. Though the library will be open four hours less on Monday, there will be no other impact to the public library, Caira said.

The only areas triggering voter reaction were the school department cuts, the MWRA assessment, and the library budget.

The Council on Aging failed in an attempt to augment its budget. COA Chairman Henry Latta sought to re-open that budget, only to learn that the motion by which the town budget was being revised had restricted the changes to line items presented in the warrant.

Aquifer report ready in October

Last May the Wilmington town meeting accepted an aquifer protection zoning plan for the water supply of Wilmington. The plan had been drawn up by IEP of Northboro, which had delineated the underground water supplies of the town. A final plan is now being prepared, and 10 copies are to be ready for various town officials, sometime in October.

The cost is expected to be about $90,000.

Chris Clark and Bill Thompson of IEP spent several hours last Thursday discussing a summary of their report with the Wilmington Water and Sewer Commissioners. The report is based on a detailed compilation of subsurface data throughout of Wilmington.

Wilmington's groundwater is drawn from an aquifer system of fine to coarse sand and gravel which fill the bedrock valleys under the town. Wilmington, Reading and North Reading have their municipal wells in this groundwater basin, which coincides roughly with the Ipswich River Basin.

There is a current combined yield of approximately seven million gallons of water a day, for the three towns. A computer model made by IEP indicates that this figure is well within the long term safe yield of the aquifer.

Under drought conditions a severe drawdown can be expected to occur in the Browns Crossing and Butters Row areas of Wilmington. One of the recommendations made last Thursday was that the Wilmington Water Department begin seasonal water level monitoring, on an ongoing basis, to detect long term water level trends. Additional pump tests should be made, they said, in the wellfields of those two areas.

The quality of water in Wilmington is good, but elevated sodium levels have been detected due to road salting practices. Potential sources of ground water contamination include industrial spills and leaky underground tanks.

The major industrial areas of Wilmington lie outside the zones which contribute to Wilmington's municipal wells, but there remain a significant number of facilities which store and use hazardous materials. The town, the report says, does have a large number of buried tanks which are older than 25 years, and which are approaching the end of their safe life span.

The Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) in July established its own set of regulatory requirements, which is to be tied to a New Source Approval permitting procedure by the State. This will require further modifications of Wilmington's zoning bylaws. IEP has outlined the preliminary requirements, and after incorporating the changes and recommendations made by the Water Commissioners IEP will produce 10 copies, to be distributed to town boards.

CVS to locate at Colonial Park Mall

The Wilmington Board of Appeals has approved a change in parking facilities for the Colonial Park Mall, located between Main and Lowell streets.

A special permit was granted allowing a building facing on Lowell Street to be demolished and also allowing changes in the parking facilities. Brown told the board that he believes a CVS drugstore will locate in the site. The appeal was heard on August 28. Attorney Daniel Brown presented the case to the board.

In other business, the board approved some changes in building lots for Rhode Island Road, off Nichols Street. The changes had to be effected because of wetlands. Four house lots will now exist where there were formerly five. Linn Anderson of the Ohio Street Realty Trust presented the arguments.

Mohamad Shafi Malek of Woburn will have to appear before the board again on September 11 for judgement on a case he presented. A new Gulf gas station at 490 Main St. was the subject. Malek wants to elevate the Gulf sign in order to have price signs which will be visible. The board

High school heating

The new heating system at Wilmington High School is nearly complete. Head custodian Jim Downs is shown in front of the two new boilers being installed by the Enterprise Equipment Co. of Weymouth. The bid price is $682,363.61. The boilers are on the right.

School schedules

It's back to school time again as classes resume in Wilmington next Wednesday, September 5.

High school students will report to homerooms at 7:35 a.m. and be released at 2 p.m. Students attending the North and West Intermediate Schools will begin their day at 8:05 a.m. and be let out at 2:25 p.m. Elementary students at the Shawsheen, Wildwood, and Woburn Street Schools will be in session from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Kindergarten orientation will be held September 5, 6, and 7. Kindergarten students at all schools will report to their first day of class Monday, September 10.

For additional information, contact the Superintendent of Schools (694-6000).

Stewart, Atkinson named to Reading Light Advisory Board

Former selectman Jim Stewart and Bob Atkinson of Agfa received the unanimous approval of the Wilmington Board of Selectmen to serve as Wilmington's advisors on Reading Light's newly formed advisory board. The men will join representatives from other member towns of the Reading Municipal Light Department and offer input to the light department.

Stewart served on the selectmen's subcommittee which conducted negotiations with Reading Light. Atkinson was a leader in the effort by Wilmington industry to press for more favorable treatment from Reading Light.

Sunday liquor sales okayed

by Arlene Surprenant

Wilmington residents will now be able to purchase liquor on Sundays between the hours of noon and 6 p.m., thanks to a unanimous vote of approval by Wilmington Selectmen Monday night. Selectmen okayed petitions by Shamrock Liquors, East Gate Liquors, Shoprite Liquors, and Colonial Park Liquors to open on Sundays. Each of those establishments will pay a $25 fee to process the new license and an additional $200 fee when their license comes up for renewal at the end of the year.

The recently passed state budget amended Chapter 136 of the Massachusetts General Laws to allow Sunday alcohol sales. Under the law, any town in Essex, Middlesex, or Worcester County may allow Sunday liquor sales if the town is within 10 miles of the New Hampshire border. However stores are not allowed to open before noon or on legal holidays and liquor store employees cannot be required to work on Sundays.

Police Chief Bobby Stewart, in a letter to the board of selectmen, said he was not opposed to the Sunday opening since he felt it would pose an economic hardship if local businesses were not allowed to compete with their counterparts across the border. Selectman Mark Haldane said it was unfair for package stores selling alcohol to be the only stores not allowed to open on Sunday. Bob Cain assured the public his board has been monitoring liquor sales "very severely" in Wilmington and will continue to do so.

Two local ministers, the Reverend Thomas Dean of the Wilmington Congregational Church and the Reverend Michael Stotts of the Wilmington United Methodist Church, were the only voices of dissent during the public hearing.

In a lengthy letter, the Rev. Stotts listed several "valid" reasons for keeping liquor stores closed. The Rev. Stotts said the new law would treat Sundays as just another weekday and pose difficulties for recovering alcoholics trying to maintain sobriety. The Rev. Dean asked the board why it was necessary to open the stores on Sunday.

Four doctors join staff at Regional Health

Boosting the staff of the Regional Health Center in Wilmington, are three internists and one pediatrician, all of whom have joined the Health Center since it was acquired by Winchester Hospital this spring.

James Todd, M.D. is a cardiologist and internist. A graduate of Western Reserve Medical School, he received his training in internal medicine at the University of Vermont Hospital Medical Center and the Harvard Service at Boston City Hospital. His training in cardiology was undertaken at Brigham and Women's Hospital. Speaking of his decision to join the Regional Health Center medical group, Dr. Todd said, "I considered several positions, but the Regional Health Center demonstrated the most caring attitude toward its patients that I encountered. The staff really knows and cares about the patients and their families."

Another recent staff member is Sharon Stotsky, M.D. who is practicing internal medicine and is also board certified in rheumatology. She is a graduate of New York Medical College and received her hospital training at Long Island Jewish Hospital and the Boston V.A. Hospital.

Two of the new staff members will join the Health Center in September. They are Sara Andrew, M.D., a pediatrician who just completed her training at Massachusetts General Hospital and internist, Sharon Rubrake, M.D., who has worked in emergency medicine and community health centers for eight years.

These physicians join five others at the Regional Health Center in Wilmington, some of whom have been practicing in the community for nearly a decade. They are: Suetten Tenney, M.D., internal medicine, and pediatricians Yvette Yatchmink, M.D., Margery B. Schonfeld, M.D., John A. Meyers, M.D. and David Saloman, M.D.

Dr. Saloman has watched the pediatrics area of the Health Center grow from one and a half to five doctors during the eight years he has been on the staff. "I came here to visit Dr. Meyers one day in 1982 and just fell in love with the place," he recalls. "It was the type of practice I really wanted - a self-contained center where patients can have all their needs met and we can refer them with confidence to specialists we know well in the same building. Our affiliation with Winchester Hospital will further help us meet the health needs of this community."

All of the Regional Health Center physicians are members of the medical staff at Winchester Hospital and can provide their patients with the full resources of the hospital, as needed.

The Regional Health Center is located at 500 Salem Street in Wilmington, just minutes from Rte. 93, at Exit 40. Its urgent care center is open from 7:30 a.m. to 10:30 p.m. seven days a week, on a walk-in basis.

New sewer for WHS

A new sewer to Wilmington High School is among the future business items to be discussed soon by the Wilmington Water & Sewer Commissioners.

Chairman Arthur Smith commented favorably on the work being done on Main Street, where a new sewer connects the area of Butters Row with the area of the Wilmington Car Wash. This week the contractor will be making a connection to the sewer which is westerly of the Lowell railroad, near the car wash.

That new connection, Smith said, will make it possible for a sewer to be constructed on Parker Street and Adams Street, to Wilmington High School.

TAX BREAKS ON VOLUNTEER WORK

There's no "pay" for volunteer work for charity beyond the personal satisfaction you feel. But there's no reason why doing good should cost you money out of pocket. You can deduct as charitable donations some of the unreimbursed expenses you incur.

Do you drive cancer patients to their doctors for treatment, or Cub Scouts on a trip? You can deduct 12 cents a mile - or direct expenses of running your car. Count mileage from home to charity, too. Parking fees and tolls are deductible; so are trains and taxis if you show up to help that way.

Were you a delegate to your organization's convention? Any expenses not reimbursed are deductible, from travel and transportation to reasonable amounts for meals and lodging. Are you a den mother? Your uniform and its upkeep are deductible, assuming they're different from your everyday clothes. You can also deduct what you spend on supplies for the group.

We'll show you where you can save on taxes.

RMLD five percent tax

The Reading Municipal Light Department (RMLD) must collect a five percent sales tax on commercial sales of electricity, effective September 1. The RMLD has mailed notices of the impending sales tax to all commercial and industrial customers in Wilmington, as well as in other communities which it serves.

According to the Reading issue of the Friday Times-Chronicle the Massachusetts Department of Revenue has advised the RMLD to collect the tax unless a company/organization provides a certificate of tax exemption issued by the DOR. Organizations which have such certificates are being asked to forward a copy to Reading Light as soon as possible.

The sales tax will not affect residential customers. Sales to municipalities, churches and public street lights remain exempt.

For industrial and commercial customers the sales tax will be implemented as a separate line item on the electric bill.

Rep. Grace appointed to airport panel

State Representative Augusto F. Grace (D-Burlington) has been named a member of the Blue Ribbon Panel, which will recommend potential sites for construction of a second major airport for New England. The 47-member panel includes business leaders, engineers, environmental experts and community group representatives. Grace is one of only three legislators on the panel.

The panel was appointed by the Massachusetts Aeronautics Commission, and is charged with developing siting criteria for a possible second major airport. It will then use these criteria to identify a short list of possible sites by next summer.

In addition, Grace has been appointed to the Steering Committee which will act as the panel's executive committee. The committee will develop and analyze the technical material which will be presented to the full panel.

"I pushed to be part of the Blue Ribbon panel to protect the interest of Hanscom area residents, by seeing to it that Hanscom Field is absolutely ruled out as a possible second airport site," said Grace. "As a member of the Steering Committee I will play a major role in shaping criteria which will remove Hanscom Field from consideration. Hanscom is unsuitable under any sound criteria, and I intend to make this clear to my fellow panel members."

Bishops celebrate 50th

They have survived 50 years of marriage, eight children and 16 grandchildren and as they are enthusiastic campers, Auggie and Reggie Bishop of Marion Street, Wilmington celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary August 2 as guests of honor at a party held at Three Ponds Campground.

Some family members camped the entire weekend while others arrived in the pouring rain on Saturday to join in the festivities.

As a gift, the children, after 'ransacking' their parents' house for old photos, compiled an album of the 50 years.

Commissioners seek state, federal flags

Is there any such thing as a Wilmington Flag, one with the Whitefield Elm on it? The Wilmington Water & Sewer Commissioners, last Thursday were asking each other if it would be possible to get one for their office.

The flag would go along with the U.S. Flag and a State Flag they felt. The subject had first been broached by Commissioner Jim Ring who felt that there should be flags in their office at the Butters Row pumping station.

The commissioners voted to send a letter to Rep. Jim Miceli, asking that he procure a state flag and a US flag that had flown over the state house for the Water Department of Wilmington.

LASHES TO DYE FOR

Women who wear contact lenses must be careful that their mascara does not flake or smudge onto their lenses and present a possibility of infection. To alleviate this worry, many contact lens wearers opt to have their eyelashes dyed. The dye used for this simple procedure is either vegetable or henna-based to ensure safety. To rule out skin sensitivity to these dyes, a patch test is usually performed on the arm to make sure that there is no allergic reaction to the dye solution. After that, the esthetician simply coats the eyelids and adjacent skin with a layer of petroleum jelly for protection. Dye is then applied to the upper and lower lashes. After 20 minutes, the dye is washed away with a cotton pad and water and the eyes are rinsed with a saline solution. Women who undergo this treatment can look forward to six weeks of smudge free lashes.

This treatment should not be attempted at home. Consult with your beautician to see if this would be appropriate for your coloring and look. We offer full beauty services at SHAWSHEEN HAIR SALON, 161 Shawshen Ave., Rt. 129, Wilmington. We also have the newest in totally natural hair care products from Matrix, Biolage. Let our stylists make your whole family look better. Call (508) 658-9475. Hours: Mon 9-6, Tues. 9-7, Wed & Thurs 9-9, Fri 9-8, Sat 9-5. M/C and Visa welcome. We wish you a happy and safe Labor Day!

EYE LASH TINT regularly $15.00, now $10.00 with this column. Expires 9/22/90. Have a safe Labor Day weekend.

HINT: Eyelash dyes prove to have the greatest effect on blond or light brown lashes.

IF IT'S ELECTION TIME, EVERYONE'S TALKING ABOUT HOW MUCH THEY WILL DO FOR THE ELDERLY...

Talk is cheap.

It's action that matters.

When it comes to the seniors of Wilmington and Tewksbury Jim Miceli's actions speak volumes about his commitment and concern.

Whether it's the many letters he has received from the Tewksbury and Wilmington Housing Authorities regarding Jim's dedication to elderly housing issues, or even the citation from the Tewksbury Golden Age Club and the plaque in his honor at the Buzzell Senior Center in Wilmington, the message is clear: Jim Miceli has been a consistent friend to seniors.

Perhaps Denis Dedeo, a member of the Tewksbury Council on Aging, said it best:

DENIS DEDEO

"Seniors know they have an old friend in Jim Miceli. He's always concerned with their well being and is always there when we need him. The work he's done for both Tewksbury and Wilmington's senior centers is legendary, from helping to get the outsidies finished to getting the inside programs funded."

Frankly Speaking

by Paul H. Sullivan

Well I hate to say I told you so, but if you refer to your collection of Frankly Speaking columns under my reign, you will find a testimonial to the appointment of Michael Caira.

Well, Michael did me proud this week with his handling of the special town meeting. In record time he accomplished a feat that has been eluding the state government of Massachusetts. He led the powers that be to balance the budget. He did this by blending his administrative skills with his political savvy.

For too long, state and local governments of Massachusetts have been unwilling or unable to deal with the fiscal realities that face them. But at this weeks Wilmington Special Town Meeting that is exactly what happened. Michael Caira came to the meeting well prepared to deal with any questions or concerns that the townspeople may have had. He did this in such a way that those in attendance adopted his recommendations in record time. Even when pressed by a resident about the wisdom of cutting monies from the school budget, which is certainly sensitive in these pro-education days, he did it in a business-like manner. He explained that regardless of the town's wish to make education a priority, the first duty of the government is to have a balanced budget.

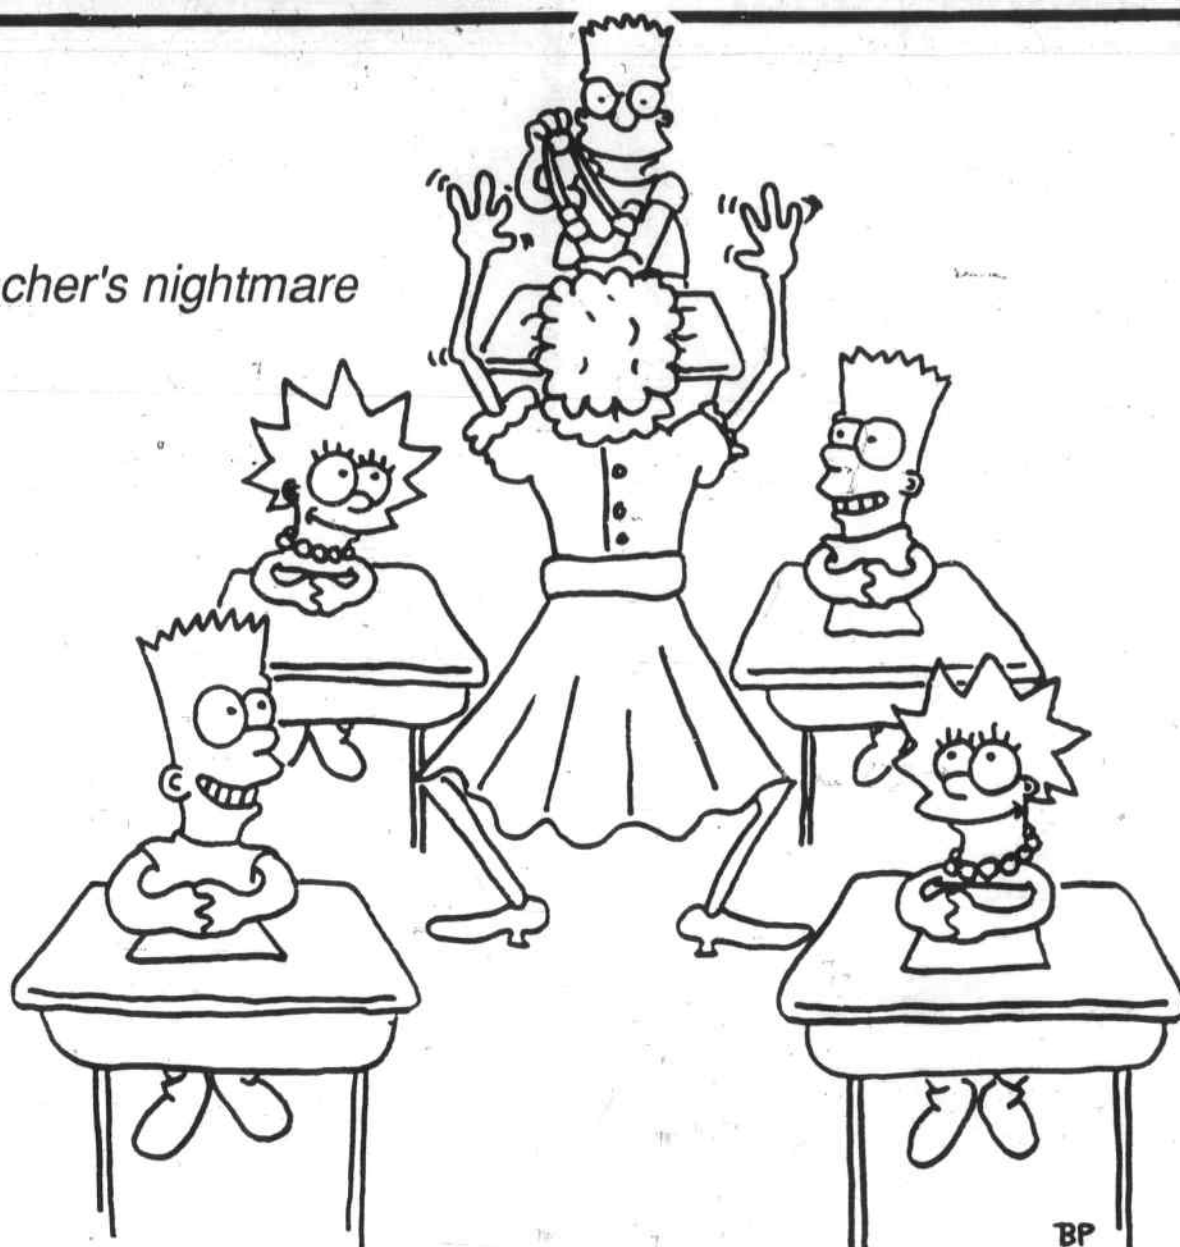

This performance by Caira is a good example of how political skills and public confidence can allow a town to be run even when the financial situation is not the best. No one has to tell the people of Wilmington that they have had some difficult political times in the last year. As a casual observer of Wilmington politics for the last ten or twelve years I can say that the political blood letting that took place could have caused the town to face a governmental paralysis that would have been devastating to the quality of life in Wilmington.

This example of leadership by the town manager should lay to rest any claims that Michael Caira is anything but an asset to the Town of Wilmington. It should also be an example to the state government and area local governments that good management is synonymous with big spending.

Had the town leaders had their way, the town would have overridden Prop. 2 1/2 on given the town more money for the programs. The townspeople rejected that override question. The town manager along with the selectman went to work and tried to make the best with what they had, and put together a budget that had no lay offs and did not cut any vital services.

All and all the town has a right to be proud of its elected officials, particularly the school committee, for their willingness to work with the town and to resist the temptation to polarize the issue with "holier than thou" posturing. The selectman also deserve credit for their support and guidance to the town manager, not to mention their courage for hiring him.

Letters to the editor

Dear Larz:

In reply to Freddie Stone's editorial letter appearing in your August 22 edition, the so called "sleepers" Freddie always alludes to have always been awake and are now noticing many offensive actions of certain local officials who continue to wield power in the Town of Wilmington at the taxpayers' expense.

As a non resident of Wilmington or Tewksbury, I wonder what Freddie's motives are and what are his interests in these two towns?

Freddie alludes to the Representative Miceli's vote against taxes. Is it possible the incumbent listens to his constituents in their plea for no new taxes? Could it be the majority of his constituents are taxed out, living on fixed incomes, attempting to survive on tight budgets?

I, for one, feel that constantly throwing money at a problem does not make the problem go away. I am sure the majority of the "sleepers" feel as I do that tax money is constantly misappropriated, that State Government is top heavy with needless administrators, political appointees and useless projects that are not thought out or are not needed.

If one were to ask the incumbent representative why he attended the Duke's "stonewalling" announcement at the Burlington Avenue Bridge, I am sure you would be advised that the incumbent attended to insure that the administration would not announce any last minute "surprises" to the bridge repair project that could frustrate legislators sincerely attempting to resolve this important issue.

Freddie, how do you know so much about Tewksbury Hospital? Could it be direct service cutbacks at Tewksbury Hospital as well as other state facilities were designed by and approved by the administration to a convince the taxpayer that more taxes were needed to get the Commonwealth out of its fiscal mess?

The cogeneration plant proposal to be located at Tewksbury Hospital, will it work? Are the taxpayers aware there is already a cogeneration plant located in Haverhill, that Tewksbury and Wilmington have been members for many years as well as many other communities? Have Tewksbury officials or residents ever been informed of such a proposal? Is the Haverhill plant generating power yet, or is it a large land fill seen from I-495 and Rte. 110 in Haverhill?

Why doesn't Freddie inform the readers about other more viable proposed projects at Tewksbury Hospital that have been "derailed" by the current administration?

Freddie, your letter appears to be a last minute effort prior to the State Primary. Everyone knows your letters are not written by you. Why doesn't that author have the guts to sign his name rather than use you?

Sincerely,
Arthur A. Barnaby

Dear Larz:

Please print my opinion in your newspaper. This issue deserves coverage. Thank you for your anticipated cooperation in this matter.

Continental Cablevision of Wilmington has recently been pressured by different Hispanic groups and lobbyists to add a Spanish-speaking television station, Univision, to all of its subscribers.

This new station is useless to almost every subscriber in this area. Presently, Univision has game shows, talk shows, movies, and news in Spanish. Moreover, Univision is not a Spanish-learning channel for English speaking Americans. Instead, Univision caters to those who speak Spanish fluently.

Univision has replaced an independent station, WPRI-TV in Providence. This station is an affiliate of ABC-TV during prime time. Moreover, people were able to learn and enjoy issues concerning Rhode Island during the day before the Spanish preserving station interfered.

The United States of America is not a bilingual nation. All of its laws, currency, and job applications are in English.

Most foreign speaking people come to the United States for a better way of life. All people can keep their culture and language.

However, since foreigners have decided to live here, they must adapt and learn our language too.

Since Univision is only for Spanish speaking people, it is a specialty channel and should be offered and billed separately from the basic fee. Home Box Office, New England Sports Network, and Black Entertainment Television programs are examples of specialty channels and each costs extra for those who purchase them. Therefore, if Hispanics want a Spanish station, they should subscribe to it and pay for it. The station should not just appear at all the subscribers homes and never have the opportunity of being used.

Hispanics should be more active in integrating in the mainstream of American life. Then they will have endless opportunities here and be able to choose from dozens of English programs to watch. Remember Hispanics. If foreigners do not learn English, a vicious circle of despair will be the unfortunate outcome.

This letter is not intended to be anti-Hispanic but to inform all Continental Cablevision subscribers of action that has recently occurred. If anyone wants to express their opinion regarding this channel, please call the Continental Cablevision Programming Manager.

Sincerely,
Jay B. Barnes

Dear Freddie the Rat:

You've done it again! Your satirical humor and "catch phrases" have stirred up a lot of mixed feelings about certain political persons and I'm beginning to wonder why (?) you are so vindictive.

You have a great gift for writing some very funny things and though everyone needs a good laugh every once in a while I don't think it should be at the expense of a person's "physical condition" of which they have no control. One notable example, such as obesity, is a heartbreaking condition for "some" people. So is loss of limbs, etc. etc.

Your first letter was not humorous and "no new taxes" is one of the things most voters favor. "No new ideas" should be blamed on the majority of the "gang" at the State House not on one person because they oppose extended sales taxes and increases in income taxes.

What happened to you that made you so much wiser and more "awake" than the Sleepers you refer to? Was it the "big guy" that came to your house one night? You didn't say he hurt you. The only one hurt was the "big guy."

His judgement was poor and he has paid a big price for his error. But that is his problem. How long does a person have to be reminded of such things? Of course it is easy to keep kicking someone while they are down, but I expected something better from you.

Why don't you start on others involved in questionable actions and give this one a rest? There have been plenty of errors in judgement in the political history of this town, and someone with your talent could do some good by commenting on some blatant ones in recent times. There are some you could really tackle!

You are in a rut and I'd like to know why it's only a couple of persons you concentrate on. Are you fighting someone else's fight?

In any event I still think of you with fondness and I appreciate your talent for writing. By the way, while I'm at this letter, I would like to state that on August 21 on Jerry Williams Show approximately six legislators were named as incumbents who have done an excellent job and should be retained. One of them was Jim Miceli from Wilmington.

point of view

A respected educator

by Arlene Surprenant

It is rare to come upon an educator that is held in respect by parents, teachers, students, school committeemen, and administrators alike. Bob Coffill was held in such esteem.

As principal of the Shawsheen School for the last few years, Mr. Coffill exhibited both professionalism and enthusiasm in the performance of his duties. He was able to instill school pride in students and teachers alike. He was a leader who was not afraid to take advice. He had ideas and was not afraid to put them into practice. He praised where praise was due. He was readily available to parents and visible in the hallways and playground. Mr. Coffill always took the time, whether it was to chat with a parent in the school parking lot on the way into the building or to stop a student in the hall and ask about his day. His enthusiasm was contagious and spread to the school PAC and the teachers themselves. No one is likely to forget Mr. Coffill's auctioneering techniques at the annual pie auction or his exuberant praise for his students and faculty during a well-received concert performance as he spoke to the audience under the Shawsheen Shark.

The Shawsheen School is a better school for Mr. Coffill's short tenure. His caring and leadership went a long way to help turn this ailing school around. Bob Coffill is leaving September 1 to assume the principalship of Lebanon High School in New Hampshire. As one of many Shawsheen parents I can only say: good luck Bob, you will be greatly missed.

Taking political action for rights of disabled

Disability issues have advanced greatly in the past ten years, and Larry Curtis has been at the forefront of many of these advances.

As an original member of the Wilmington Handicapped Affairs Committee, Larry has led the group through a metamorphosis into commission status. Alongside the commission is a private, non-profit group able to collect, hold and disburse money as a non-profit organization.

Now Larry is heading yet another non-profit group, this one for political action, with a wider focus. The Merrimack Valley Coalition of Disabled Advocates, Inc. serves as a vehicle to advance disability issues in the political arena. The group draws input from many areas of the disabled community, trying to understand and help the needs of people with any sort of a disability. They then come up with a political position to benefit those concerns.

On Tuesday, Larry participated in a rally for equal access, held at the HUD office in the O'Neill Federal Building in Boston. The MVCDA concern was that HUD was considering three options for guidelines for access standards in new apartment construction. Two of those options would allow for exemptions, which would result in developers being able to escape requirements mandated under a 1988 law.

Earlier this year, Larry and Carol Beaudoin travelled to Washington, D.C. for the demonstration on the Washington Mall in support of the Americans with Disabilities Act, which President Bush ultimately signed.

Besides the power of demonstrations, the MVCDA also uses political endorsements. Recently they endorsed Atty. Gen. Jim Shannon, based on his support for disability rights. The endorsement cited a half dozen accomplishments of the attorney general which supported disabled people.

Curtis stresses that endorsements are based on positions and issues, not on personalities.

The MVCDA basically serves as a vehicle through which disabled people can achieve political empowerment. The group began as a classroom where advocates could develop and enhance their advocacy skills. They now engage in several areas of activity, including providing community support for municipal commissions on disability issues, offering peer support for specialty groups, and giving updates on advocacy issues at the state level.

In spite of ten years of working for public access, there is still a lot of work that needs to be done. Wilmington is much farther along than nearby towns. Some people misunderstand the issue of access, thinking that disabled people have achieved that.

"No, we haven't," says Curtis, who travels in an electric wheelchair and a lift-equipped van. Larry broke his neck 17 years ago while working as an electrician.

He sees the disabled community as a strong potential political base. There are 43 million people in the U.S. who are disabled, he said, and each of them have relatives and friends.

"We need support because we're disabled," he said. "We have to accept that there are certain things we cannot do."

Yet he firmly believes that assistance should only be given when it is needed and asked for. "Don't assume we need total assistance," he said. That only leads backwards, toward institutionalization.

Retirement party

After 32 years of keeping the peace, Tewksbury Officer "Joe" Cormier is retiring. A party to note the event will be held at the Tewksbury-Wilmington Lodge of Elks on South Street, on September 21, with cocktails at 7 p.m. Tickets for the event are available, at $25 each, through Sgt. Bolton or Officers Jones or Westaway at the station. Music by The Good Guys -- and that's an appropriate band for an officer who fits that description.

backyard gardening

by Hugh Wiberg
You can set your gardening calendar by it.

Sometime between August 18 and August 25 here in the Merrimack Valley, the night time temperature will dip into the upper 40's. It happened this year on Sunday the 19th, when we noted a 48 on our outdoor thermometer.

What does this mean for the average gardener? Not an awful lot, unless you happen to be growing giant pumpkins! Only pumpkin and squash plants seem to notice the suddenly cooler nights and mornings. For whatever the plant's physiological reason, the pumpkins slow their rate of growth noticeably, and even with the hot days and nights which will follow in September, these garden oddities never regain the tremendous growing momentum they had in July and early August.

Bits and pieces:

There are still four or five weeks left in this growing season. It is much too early to abandon the garden to weeds. Take 20 minutes this weekend and tidy up the garden and you'll be sure to see some of your waning enthusiasm return.

This is the best time of the year to purchase trees and shrubs. Garden supply outlets will be featuring huge discount sales in August and September in order to avoid carrying excess inventories over the winter. Watch for ads in the local papers. It is not uncommon to see 40 percent and 50 percent off sales on rhododendrons, azaleas, arbutus, yews, and so on.

We are approaching country fair season and now is the time to mark the calendar. Attend one or more of the following:

1. Topsfield Fair - Dates: September 29 through October 8. In spite of adding a lot of carnival atmosphere over the last dozen or so years, Topsfield Fair does a decent job of projecting a legitimate country fair atmosphere. It continues to be well worth the price of admission. ($5 adults, $4 children) and delivers a lot of entertainment for the modest fee. Avoid Saturdays and Sundays if at all possible. The traffic up and down Route 1 can be horrendous.

2. Deerfield Fair - Deerfield, N.H. Dates: Sept. 27 (Thursday) through Sept. 30 (Sunday). Deerfield retains 90 percent of the legitimate country fair atmosphere of a generation ago. Though only one quarter the size and scope of Topsfield, this fair is considered one of the top five true country fairs in New England. To get to Deerfield, (60 miles north of Wilmington) take 125 North from Haverhill to Route 152. A pleasant 15 miles west takes you directly into Deerfield.

3. Common Ground Fair - Dates, Sept. 21-23, Windsor, Maine. Anyone with an organic gardening interest should try to attend this fair. It is sponsored by the Maine Organic Farmers and Gardeners Assn. The stated goal of this association and fair is to find and address ways to enhance and protect the environment and wildlife. This fair probably comes closest to providing a genuine Down East atmosphere much like our grandparents experienced 100 years ago. Windsor, Maine is 15 miles east of Augusta and about 160 miles from Wilmington. Plan to visit at least one country fair over the next six weeks.

 During the summer months throughout the country, there are occasional water shortages. But, lawns and gardens don't understand the problem and manage to do well on their own for a while. Still, it is necessary for their growth and well-being to get water. So, a good idea in times of water shortage, or any time for that matter, for water conservation, a water wand with a control valve at the handle is both convenient and economical. With the long wand tube attached to the end of your hose, watering can be limited to specific areas. Other water saving measures include timing devices, directional sprays and watering in the evenings to prevent rapid evaporation from the hot sun. Careful landscaping and plant selection helps as well.

 Each garden or landscaping plan presents its own unique challenges for watering and water conservation. For sound advice, come to A & M NURS-

Colonial-era tragedy occurred in Webber house

Webber Place is a nice shopping center which overlooks the Maple Meadow Plain. It was so named because there stood the home of the late Stanley Webber, and his wife George Marie Ann McIntosh. She was a lady who was the head of the business department of Wilmington High School when she retired.

The Webber house, on Main Street in Wilmington, about opposite to Butters Row was torn down about 1987. It was the eighth, or ninth home to be constructed in what is now Wilmington.

The Maple Meadow Plain was so named by the early settlers of Woburn. Samuel Walker, third son of the first Deacon Samuel Walker of Woburn was the man who probably constructed the Webber house, some time after his marriage to Judith Howard on June 1, 1689.

The home was constructed to be "square to the universe," as were many early Colonial homes, but it does not seem to have been as large as were other homes of that date. Sometime later, say after the (US) Civil War someone changed the shape of the house to face Main Street, rather than the sun. Being "square to the universe" (facing due south) was a great advantage for the heating of homes before stoves were invented.

A house so built got all the advantages of getting heat from the sun, morning, noon and evening.

This is not a story of Stanley and his fair lady. One could write such a tale.

Webber house

The home of the late Stanley Webber was torn down about three years ago to make way for a commercial development.

Nor is it to be a story of Asa Sheldon, who lived in that home during his latter years, about the time of the Civil War.

The Wilmington Public Library has several volumes of Asa's book, printed by some ladies from the Wilmington Women's Club about 40 years ago. It is the best book ever to have been written by a Wilmington resident, by a person who modestly called himself a "Wilmington Farmer." He wrote it while in that home, overlooking the Maple Meadow Plain.

Asa lived in that home about 130 years ago. Go back another 130 years and there is a story such as never occurred in any other home in Wilmington.

About 1725 Samuel and Judith Walker moved to a home in Shawsheen, an area that is now Burlington. He had been named a Deacon of the Woburn church, and when Shawsheen became the Second Precinct of Woburn he aided in "gathering" a church in what is now Burlington.

Their son, Capt. Samuel Walker, was probably born in the home which overlooked the Maple Meadow Plain on Sept. 3, 1694. He lived there with his wife Hannah, after his parents had moved to Shawsheen.

Capt. Walker, along with such persons as Deacon James (Jeams) Thompson and Deacon John Harnden were the principal movers for a new town, in Goshen, a town which was to be called Wilmington.

Deacon John Harnden was the son of Deacon John Harnden. The first Deacon served in the Reading Church and the second was one of the first Deacons in the Wilmington church. His son, Captain John, was by reputation a man who never dodged a fight, and there was a great-grandson of the same name who lived in the same home.

Deacon John Harnden of Wilmington and his wife Mary Jacquith were the parents of four children who died during the first six days of August, in 1737. It was a disease which would suddenly strike the children of the early settlers. The settlers called it "Distemper."

Today it is called Diphtheria. There were many homes in Wilmington in which the disease struck, often more than once.

The worst case was in the home of Capt. Samuel and his wife Hannah. There were 12 children. Nine of those children died in 1738, of what was then called "throat distemper."

No tragedy of such a magnitude ever struck any other home in Wilmington.

Diet counseling can improve patients' health

One in every three Americans over the age of 20 has a cholesterol level high enough to require medical treatment. This alarming statistic was determined by government researchers as reported in The Boston Globe. Cholesterol has been linked to heart disease, the leading cause of death in the U.S.

For individuals who suffer from high cholesterol, the Regional Health Center in Wilmington provides nutritional services and counseling. Nutritional counsel is also provided for a variety of eating disorders such as anorexia nervosa or bulimia and medical problems such as diabetes, weight control and hypoglycemia.

"The idea is to make changes in eating habits that people can live with for the rest of their lives," said Elvira Johnson, registered dietician (R.D.) M.S. She believes the program at the Regional Health Center is unique because of the "personalized and individualized counseling" that is offered to patients. The program allows a patient to set realistic goals and maintain a diet based on their own lifestyle.

"Before I started at the program, my cholesterol level was 300, my triglycerides were 410 and my blood sugar level was 167; I was severely diabetic and I suffered from dizzy spells and had difficulty sleeping," Paul Smith related. He came to the Regional Health Center after his physician referred him to the nutrition program. "Since starting the counseling, my cholesterol level dropped to 200, my triglycerides to 200 and my blood sugar level to 127. I lost 35 pounds. I'm completely satisfied with the program and it certainly made a difference in my life."

Another dietician at the Regional Health Center is Julie A. Daly, R.D. Along with Johnson, Daly works with primary care physicians monitoring a number of patients. Their goal is to maintain the nutritional health of the patient with medical and dietetic change.

Daly credits the growth of the program, begun in 1979, with extensive training and "reality based counseling." Patients are placed on a 1-2 week appointment cycle, allowing the dietitians to keep in close touch with the patients. Judith Miller and Debra Broderick were both patients referred to the program because of their high cholesterol levels.

"The nutritionist made me more aware of fat content that I hadn't noticed before," Judith Miller commented as she talked about her cholesterol problem. Patients are taught how to read and understand food labels and packaging, so that they can choose nutritionally correct foods. "I knew you had to watch labels, but I didn't know how much. I think twice now about eating a candy bar with nine grams of fat," Debra Broderick said. Both patients were very satisfied with the program and felt it had benefited their lives.

"The goal of the program is to assist patients in making modifications in their diet that will improve their health and help correct the medical problems that sent them here for help," said Johnson. She believes that as people become more concerned with nutrition and health care, nutritional counseling will inevitably become more important.

Money matters

Mortgage shopping involves more than just interest

by Tony Accardi

It pays to shop around for any major purchase, and a mortgage is no exception. Thousands of dollars can be saved by finding the mortgage that is right for you.

Once you have an idea of the size and type of loan you want, the quickest way of finding the best mortgage for your personal needs is to call lenders directly.

All too often, borrowers focus solely on interest rate when hunting for a mortgage. This is unfortunate for there are many other facets of prospective financing that should be considered before a choice is made on which mortgage program to select.

The most obvious of these is discount points. Loan discount points are more commonly referred to as simply points. Each point is equal to one percent of the loan amount. As an example, a mortgage of $100,000, that charges two points, will require that the borrower pay $2,000 in points. When hunting for your mortgage determined how many points the lender will charge and if there is an origination fee.

According to mortgage officer Jack Gaffey of the Stoneham Cooperative Bank in Wilmington, 60 percent of his customers inquire if a loan will be serviced by the actual local lender. Gaffey states "I would estimate that 10 percent of my business comes directly from the fact that Stoneham Coop. services its loans in-house."

Gaffey points out that some borrowers have become disillusioned by horror stories of poor service provided by out of state lenders.

Another item to explore, besides interest rates, is legal fees. They do vary from attorney to attorney. Many banks will offer a list of attorneys from which to choose, while others will simply assign one from a preapproved list.

It may sound obvious, but be sure to ask the length of your borrowing term. Shorter term loans are less expensive than longer ones. As an example, the current, average 15 year, mortgage rate is approximately 9.8 percent while the 30 year is 10.1 percent.

The length of time it takes for a bank to process a loan is another important factor in determining your mortgage selection. Remember, if you are buying and not refinancing, you have a time limit in which to obtain financing commitment from a bank.

James Purtell, vice president of Mortgage Financial Services in Tewksbury, cautions "beware of junk fees! In particular, I'm referring to costs such as document preparation charges, processing charges, and underwriting charges."

Purtell claims the name of the game is personal customer service, "people today are looking for a lender that will bend over to meet their needs."

And, finally ask about rate lock. The interest rate quoted to you on the day of application does not necessarily have to be the interest you are charged on the day of closing. The only way to assure this is by locking in the rate. Some banks will charge a lock-in fee and have a time restriction on when it can be done.

Smart shoppers all have one thing in common, they understand exactly what they are buying. So don't be afraid to ask questions! And remember the objective is to strive for the best package of terms before proceeding with a loan.

Farmer & the Del taps a 'sleeping giant'

Consumers in recent years have taken to buying bottled water, most of it from "springs." The desire for pure water leads them to spend money seeking what they hope will be a pure product. In reality, all spring water comes from ground-water sources, which have the potential to become contaminated.

Bottled water has now progressed to a step which guarantees a pure product. Vita Drinking Water is now selling distilled water at Farmer & the Del in Wilmington.

Distillation has been the sleeping giant of the water purification industry.

Instead of purifying water with filters or added chemicals, distillation is a method of simply converting the product to water vapor and then back to water (condensation). All impurities are left behind.

Customers can purchase the water Lexan bottles provided by Vita, and then re-use the bottles for even greater savings.

State-of-the-art system at Winchester

The cutting edge. It's a term not often associated with community health care institutions. But it clearly defines the diagnostic capabilities at Winchester Hospital, where high technology is a high priority.

Within the past year, the hospital has acquired an impressive line up of state-of-the-art, computerized diagnostic equipment. While each system is quite different, they all provide physicians with clear and detailed images from within the human body. As a result, physicians are often able to detect disease at an early stage, and are able to make the most accurate diagnosis possible.

"At Winchester Hospital, we are continually investigating the technologies we can utilize to provide our community with the highest level of quality care," said Eugene E. Loubier, president of Winchester Hospital. "We demonstrate that commitment by providing the very best diagnostic tools available, consistent with the quality of a community hospital."

Most recently, the hospital purchased a Digital Subtractive Angiography (DSA) system, which is used to diagnose circulatory problems. This apparatus provides radiologists with an unobstructed, and therefore improved, picture of the inside of an artery. And patients requiring this procedure can expect a safer, quicker, and more convenient examination process.

Winchester Hospital has also invested in Magnetic Resonance Imaging (MRI). According to Robert Fortunato, MD, a radiologist on staff at the hospital, MRI can be used to examine any part of the body, although it is particularly useful in the diagnosis of knee, shoulder, and spinal injuries. This non-invasive procedure utilizes magnetic field, rather than radiation, to capture its images. Thus, it is as safe and painless a procedure as it is comprehensive.

"With equipment such as DSA and MRI, Winchester Hospital has raised its capabilities to state-of-the-art," explained Dr. Fortunato. "These technologies set us apart from other community hospitals."

Another new technology, the gamma camera, generates images after a radioactive substance has been injected into the blood stream. However, the patient is exposed to such a small amount of radiation that the procedure poses few, if any, risks. Recently, Winchester Hospital upgraded its gamma camera to single photon emission computerized tomography (SPECT), further enhancing its diagnostic capabilities.

The SPECT, which is primarily used to detect lesions in the brain, bone, liver and heart, differs from a standard gamma camera in that it produces both two dimensional and three dimensional images. These enhanced images produce more specific information on target organs ensuring the best possible diagnosis.

The SPECT has been described as a "work horse" because of its ability to perform so many functions. But, as is true with DSA and MRI, it is performing one function not likely to show up on a product fact sheet: it is attracting select medical professionals to the hospital.

"We have acquired the kind of equipment that helps us to stay on the cutting edge of medicine," Dr. Fortunato remarked. "This type of technology in a medical environment stimulates and upgrades the overall quality of care."

The faculty at Dance Productions takes the field of Performing Arts very seriously! We begin professional training techniques at the early age of 3. Each student is approached as a potential professional dancer. Although many study dance for fun and exercise, the discipline learned through dance stays with them forever. For those planning to make dance a profession, our unlimited program has been developed to provide the serious dancer with many hours of classes per week. Auditioning, conventions, master classes and student teaching are available to these dedicated students. Many of our unlimited students have won top awards in competitions on the regional, state and national levels. We are extremely proud of their accomplishments and appreciate the positive influence they have on many of our young aspiring dancers!

Middlesex offers Environmental Tech

Middlesex Community College has announced a new nine course Environmental Technology Certificate Program beginning this fall. The certificate program is presented by the Business & Industry Programs division of the Open Campus and the Math, Science and Technology Division. It has been designed to help upgrade the skills of individuals in the growing field of environmental health and safety as well as to prepare others interested in entering the field.

"The program is significant in that it provides a comprehensive package of courses which has been revised and approved by an industry advisory committee," reports Business and Industry Director Christopher Brennan. "Having the input of the Advisory

The Environmental Technology Advisory Committee includes representatives from Alpha Industries, Woburn; Ceramic Process Systems, Milford; Clean Harbors, Braintree; The Lexington Fire Department; North East Solvents Corp., North Andover; and Raytheon, Bedford and Lexington.

Specialty courses in the areas of industrial waste treatment, hazardous materials management and occupational health and safety are included in the program, along with environmental studies, chemistry and related courses. Classes begin early September.

Wilmington senior topics

Center closed Monday

Labor Day will be celebrated Monday, Sept. 3 and the Center will be closed. Please make appointments accordingly as the van will not be on the road.

Council meets Sept. 10

The Council on Aging September meeting will be held on the second Monday - Sept. 10.

Fall lunch

The fall lunch program will resume with the opening of school. The meal will be served in the High School cafeteria at 10:45 a.m. We will be returning to the selection of one of three meals. You can select a hot meal like the ones served during the summer program, or you may select a sandwich and soup. The last selection would be a salad with soup. Remember you are allowed to order only one of the above for 50 cents. If you want a hot meal, it has to be eaten at the school. The State Board of Nutrition forbids hot meals to be taken home from congregated meal site. Bacteria the cause of contamination can set in very quickly. Meals that are delivered to the homes are packaged immediately after cooked and delivered in protective containers. If you want to pay for another meal to take home, a packaged sandwich can be purchased for 50 cents.

Stay out of the kitchen!

The Board of Health does not allow seniors being served at the lunch site to enter the kitchen part of the site! The women serving the meals are properly dressed with plastic gloves and hair coverings to prevent them from causing bacteria to contaminate the food being served to the seniors. You are not protected.

Unsigned letter, uck!

As was stated in this column, if any person has a complaint on the lunch program closing down for a week and a half, they should complain to Mrs. Quinn at the High School. Obviously the person who sent a letter complaining that her mother-in-law was to starve for 16 days did not read the column! If the letter was signed and the name of the senior given, I could have checked on her. As I said, if any senior has no family to make up a meal for them, an extra meal could be ordered every day. The drivers checked all those on the list to make sure they would be alright until the lunch program resumed.

All those receiving meals would be either taking care of themselves or would be having a family member taking their meals to them. The Council on Aging puts a large amount of their budget into the lunch program to make sure no senior confined to their home, due to illness or disability rich or poor needing a meal is deprived of it. As for serving it every day of the week all through the year would be up to the State of Massachusetts

Board of Nutrition and Mrs. Quinn. The Council would be happy to increase its budget to deliver the meals if the State of Mass. would put up the necessary money to purchase the food and pay for the extra help to the women who prepare the package and extra meals.

Officer Shelley needs help

Police Officer Bobby Shelley is in need of senior citizens to help him as school is about to open. He needs full and part-time crossing guards. The full time guards would be working one hour in the morning and one hour in the afternoon. The pay is $10 a day and you will be paid every two weeks. The part time guards will fill in when a guard is not able to work. If you can help, call the police station and ask for Officer Shelley. If he is not at the station, leave your name and telephone number; he will be only to happy to call you.

Openings in Yoken's trip

There are still openings for the September therapeutic social. A bus ride to Portsmouth, N.H. and lunch at Yoken's. We have reserved a function room with a dance floor for those who wish to dance before and after the meal. If you would rather shop, Yoken's has an excellent gift shop.

Put your name in the bowl

If you have not put your name in the bowl on the counter for the $50 food gift certificate donated monthly by the Rotary Club to the seniors, don't forget to do so this week.

Redmen, Wildcats ready for run at the top

by Rick Cooke

When the Tewksbury and Wilmington High School football teams break their respective camps this weekend, area fans will see two teams ready to make runs at the very best that the tough Merrimack Valley Football Conference has to offer.

It should be one of the most interesting area football seasons in recent memory, with the Redmen led by first-year coach Joe DelGrosso and a bunch of talented returning varsity starters and the Wildcats fired by 1989 Coach of the Year Ed Harrison and an influx of 28 sophomores to bring the WHS varsity numbers up over the 50 player mark for the first time in years.

Most area coaches feel that Andover and Tewksbury are the teams to beat, with defending MVC champion Central Catholic and always tough Chelmsford strong contenders for the crown as well.

Dracut, Methuen and Lowell could either be darkhorses or spoilers, depending upon your point of view. The remainder of the league will be on the outside looking in, with new coaches Peter Flynn (Billerica) and Mike Qualter (Lawrence) facing the toughest tasks of anyone in the conference. The Indians and the Lancers won a combined three games a year ago and will be hard pressed to match that figure during the 1990 campaign.

Tewksbury's DelGrosso faces a challenge in that he is replacing a legend in Bob Aylward, who has left to guide the Nashua High School Purple Panthers after 16 years at the TMHS helm.

The task gets even tougher when you realize that with the people that Tewksbury has returning, the new coach will be expected to win almost immediately.

Don't expect drastic changes in the traditionally strong TMHS football system, however because DelGrosso was an assistant coach during most of Aylward's tenure and he knows that the system works and the kids returning are all well-versed in the Aylward style of Tewksbury football—that being a wide open offense and a defense that flies to the football.

The Redmen offense should be dynamite with 1,000 yard rusher Tim Lightfoot returning for his senior season. The only thing that put a damper on Tim's season a year ago was his temper, and with that under control, who knows how much more valuable he can be to the team this season.

Senior halfback Sean Conley also returns to the TMHS backfield, and he is a versatile runner and receiver. Quarterback Dana Boudreau is only a junior, and although he does not possess great foot speed, he is a classic drop-back passer with a fine arm. In just seven games as a sophomore Boudreau connected for 10 touchdown passes.

One of Boudreau's main targets in 1990 will be senior flanker Sean Mackey, probably the best all-around athlete on this team. Mackey has made 79 catches in two seasons at Tewksbury and he is a legitimate all-conference player. Another target could be senior tight end John Harvey, who at 6-2, 210 pounds is one of the biggest players on this TMHS team.

It's nice to have all those skill people returning, but DelGrosso will be counting on some veterans along the offensive line to provide some stability as well. Seniors Marc Whynt (6-3, 235), Andy DiFelice (5-10, 175) and Paul Mottolo (5-10, 210) all must avoid injury and play well for the TMHS offense to remain steady.

Defensively the leader should be senior linebacker Brian Brooks (5-10, 175), a player who came on strong throughout the second half of last season. Bob Barasso (5-7, 165) is another linebacker that the Redmen are counting on, while senior Bill Sharkey (5-7, 165) anchors the defensive line.

Again this season the Redmen must avoid injuries to key people and some underclassmen must step up and play well. But, if the adjustment to a year minus Aylward goes as smoothly as anticipated, this team should have no problem charging toward the top of the MVC pack.

Harrison and his Wilmington Wildcats are much younger than the Redmen, but they might be just as promising given the fact that the town's Pop Warner program is beginning to pay dividends by returning the football interest level at WHS.

Many of those 28 sophomores out for the WHS varsity should see considerable playing time, so patience while they gain experience will be very important this season.

Leadership from the Wilmington veterans will also be very important, and there are some solid lettermen returning. They include tackle and defensive end Bill Kerrigan (6-3, 227), versatile receiver and quarterback Dennis Walsh, receiver Bob Voner, tough junior running back Bob Fleming, defensive back Mike King and senior guard Brian Murray.

A year ago Wilmington had just 27 players out for the varsity football team and people were wondering just how much longer this outfit could compete in the MVC. Well, that team scrapped to a 5-5 season and thanks to some strange decision making, the Wildcats and the entire conference has now been moved up to a Division One rating. If any team is up to this challenge it is the Wildcats, who will be in every game they play this season thanks largely to toughness alone.

Right direction

Wilmington High School field hockey coach Jan Cassidy instructs her team during a tryout timeout last week. The WHS girls will be looking to rebound from an off season a year ago.

The forgotten sport of nighttime 'coon hunting

by Bill Conlon

My grandfather would be a happy man these days, God rest his soul.

Jack Murray of Tyngsboro was a big fancier of raccoon hunting. In his day, coons were scarce, since so many hunters were chasing the big furballs.

Today, the sport is forgotten, but the coons aren't. Big, fat coons are all over the place, in trash cans and dumpsters, living like kings.

Coon hunting is an arcane sport, and one of the few that require the use of dogs. Rabbit hunters know the value of a good beagle, and bird hunters use a pooch to flush out or retrieve their catch. But hunting of coons is done only with a dog.

Back in his time, Jack used to call up a few friends, and get together on a Saturday night to hunt coons. Each man brought his own favorite coon dog, often a bloodhound or a bluetick hound.

Today, you'd be lucky to find any coon hounds at all in this area.

They'd then drive to a likely spot, and cut the dogs loose, then sit back to enjoy the evening. The hounds would "work" an area, sniffing up a coon, while the boys waited by the lantern and told stories. It could take as quick as a minute, or as long as two or three hours, for the dogs to sniff up a coon.

The mark of a good coon dog is the ability to really sing out when a coon is tracked. The dogs will then chase the coon, baying loudly, until the coon runs up a tree. Good coon hounds display a different voice in their baying if a coon is treed. The hunters would sit around until the baying changed from a "chasing" song to a "treed" song.

At that point, the men would pick up their belongings and follow the sound, tromping over hill and dale, swamp and pasture, following the sound of the dogs. It was no trouble finding the right tree.

Once at the tree, a flashlight was used to find the coon, since its eyes would reflect the light. A shot with a .22 often ended the game, but the dogs had to be kept off the coon, or else they'd tear it to pieces.

Sometimes, according to Jack's son, my uncle John, the men needed a live coon to train the dogs. That meant the youngest of the gang had to climb the tree and shake the coon out of the branches.

A furious, 30-pound raccoon in a pine tree is no fun to confront, my Uncle John says, but the critter was somehow shaken out and somebody on the ground would net it or stuff it into a burlap sack. But the dogs would have to be pulled off first, since they'd leap to the attack.

Tewksbury's "Bub" Manley said the most memorable part of a coon hunt, to him, was the horrendous fight when a live, ex-treed coon was dropped in front of the hounds. Fur flew, teeth and claws slashed, and the air was a roar of snarls and howls. A true Battle Royale.

But a coon hunter's nightmare is water. A big coon in the water is an even match for even the best dog. The coon will try to swim onto a dog's neck, then sit on its head until it drowns. It wasn't uncommon for a coon in the water to kill a dog. It was a sad occasion, but it happened.

Those were the "good old days," by the stories I'm told.

Today, there are big, bold coons all over town. Raccoons today are smart enough to know the humans don't bother them anymore, and they know that humans don't come out much at night. So, the night belongs to the raccoons. They have roosts and hidey holes in places that they'd never touch even 20 years ago, and there's probably one close enough to your house that he could hear you yell if you step outside.

Years ago, hunters kept the coons in check, but no more. Without any predators to keep them down, their numbers have blossomed. Coyotes dare not tangle with an adult coon, and no other real predators exist.

In Grandpa Jack's day, that coon in your trash cans wouldn't stand a chance. One of the neighborhood coonhounds would chase him up a tree, just for fun. Today, that coon is safe and fat, with only cars to worry about.

Night hunting for raccoons is the only after-dark hunting with guns allowed in Massachusetts. Read the abstracts of the 1990 fishing and hunting laws and you'll see, under Wildlife Management Area rules, that lights and guns are even legal on WMAs, only for coon hunting. Jacking deer with a light is illegal and immoral and anybody doing it should be sent to jail to think about it, but coon hunting is done purely after dark.

Roasted coon, by the by, has dark meat and a strong flavor. The meat is tallowy, so the fat sticks to your lips, but the fat isn't nasty-tasting like venison fat. I've eaten roasted coon a few times, years ago.

I was too young to go hunting for coons with my grandfather, and he died before I was mature enough to hike the darkened swamps with the boys. Pity. I'd love to try it.

If Grandpa Jack Murray was alive today, he'd have a pack of hounds in the back yard, ready to roll on a moment's notice. With all the coons around today, Grandpa Jack would never get a decent night's sleep, but he'd love every minute of it.

And what better way to spend a Saturday night than out with the boys, telling stories by the edge of a darkened swamp, listening to the distant song of hounds baying at a coon on the run.

--- Tackle Box ---

A deep bow and tip of the fedora to Kim Dotson of Tewksbury, who kindly offered me a list of possible subjects for this column. It'll take a bit of research, but I'll certainly do most of them.

S.W.E.A.T. is planning their annual cleanup of the Shawheen River on Saturday, September 8, from 7 a.m. until 1 p.m., gathering at the Tewksbury Knights of Columbus on Route 38. With all the emphasis on the environment these days, let's see something more substantial than a bunch of people in business suits planting another tree at the edge of a forest. This event means work, so bring rope, chainsaws, boats, boots, trash bags, and a real sense of what the environment truly needs. This is not another "symbolic" gesture.

On September 16, the Merrimack River will be crowded with boats and anglers for the Greater Lowell Fly Fishers' tenth annual fishing derby. A $15 entry fee at the old Lowell bathhouse will sign you up for a biggest bass and carp event, to be fished from 7 a.m. until 2. With luck, the traditional rains will hold off this year. Maybe.

The lethal strings will twang for deer in New Hampshire, starting in mid-September, and nobody seems to want to talk fishing much anymore. Too bad.

These Tewksbury Youth Football players are ready to begin a tough season that opens in September. Look for the football schedule in an upcoming edition of the Town Crier.

Paul Peitavino, 69, of New Bedford, has more bullhead award pins than anyone in the state. As a joke, Paul sent in a photo of him with an eel he had caught in May, but Dan McGuinness at Fisheries & Wildlife took note. While not a state award species, Dan checked the National Freshwater Fishing Hall of Fame, in Hayward, Wisconsin, and found that Paul's was the second biggest eel ever taken. Paul had an eel that weighed a whopping 7.5 pounds, and was an unbelievable 52 inches long, with a girth of seven inches around. Yikes! The eel was taken at Sansuit Pond, Mashpee, on a worm, and Paul now holds the new world class eel record for 10-pound test line. And it all started as a joke. Nice joke, eh?

Incidentally, Dan said there is no truth to the rumors of a new state record largemouth bass, allegedly taken this year. The current record bass, at 15-plus-pounds, is still safe.

New England Open Golf Tournament

The New England Handicapped Sportsmen's Association (NEHSA) is joining forces this year with the Eastern Amputee Golf Association and the Amherst Lions Club to sponsor the Fourth Annual New England Open Golf Tournament, September 13-14-15, at the Amherst Country Club, Rte. 122, Amherst, New Hampshire.

A golf clinic will be held on Sept. 12 at the Ponemah Driving Range (across the street from the golf course) from 1 to 4 p.m.

There will be a scramble on the 13th, with both amputees and non-amputees participating, followed by a clambake.

Tournament play is limited to amputees and begins on the 14th with first tee off at 9 a.m.

Proceeds from the events benefit the many fine programs supported by these three organizations.

Although NEHSA is embarking on its' first golf tournament, they are not newcomers when it comes to participating in wonderful and rewarding outdoor sports.

NEHSA is an all-volunteer, non-profit organization whose purpose is to provide physically handicapped persons with an opportunity to enjoy more active lives through sports participation.

NEHSA's year round program features skiing in the winter and a variety of summer activities which include golf, camping, canoeing, swimming, water skiing and kayaking.

NEHSA has been running a ski program at Mt. Sunapee for the past 17 years. This program has enabled thousands of handicapped persons to learn to ski. The game plan is that once they learn to ski, they learn to succeed, and many of them do just that. And that means that the program has succeeded.

If you've visited their winter program at Mt. Sunapee, you have probably found yourself thinking, "Why on earth do these people walk out to those beat-up old trailers?"

The answer to that question is because that is all that was available. But that is about to change.

New Hampshire state officials also looked at the trailers and wondered the same question. Recently, the state granted permission for NEHSA to erect a "temporary" ski school building.

The plan is for the new building to be used until the ski area someday completes its' expansion plan, making building space available to NEHSA.

The only catch is that NEHSA has to build it. So if it has to be done, they'll do it.

The first and greatest need is money. They are looking at a capital outlay of $50,000. Funds raised through the New England Open Golf Tournament will help fund the new building.

Ski school participants will no longer have to climb the temporary steps into the trailers. Equipment people will be able to keep things in good order in a permanent setting, instead of having to put forth an annual effort to reorganize equipment that fell down when the trailers were moved. NEHSA will finally have a home.

So, please come join NEHSA for some terrific golf. Many fine programs will benefit from your participation.

For further tournament information, please contact Bob Wilson, vice president, Eastern Amputee Golf Association at 603-673-1135.

Donations to this event are also welcomed. Please contact Paul Lamm, president, NEHSA at 508-688-08997.

Carolyn Magee is bride

Carolyn Magee daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Magee of Wilmington, became the bride of Thomas Cronin, son of John Cronin and the late Winifred Cronin of Melrose on Sunday, June 17.

The mid-afternoon ceremony was performed before the altar of St. Thomas Church by Father Robert M. Browne.

The bride wore a gown of crisp white shimmering satin featuring a portrait neckline of soft shirring and lace and applied bodice. Irrescent sequins and pearls covered the bodice and were scattered in the lace around the hemline and sweeping into a full cathedral train. She wore a matching headpiece of imported illusion and scalloped edge fingertip veil with pearls outlining the edge to complete her bridal ensemble. She carried a cascade bouquet of white casablanca lilies, stephanotis, freshia and pearls.

The colors of the day were a veiled petal pink and powder blue found in her attendant's romantic floral printed taffeta tea length dresses and country bouquets of pink gerbers, pink mini carnations and freshia.

Diane Magee, of Wilmington, sister of the bride served as maid of honor while the attendants include Patricia Magee of Winthrop, sister-in-law of the bride; Elizabeth Cronin of Medford, cousin of the groom; Kerrin Taylor and Elizabeth Venuti of Wilmington, close friends of the bride and Margaret DiCredico of Melrose, sister of the groom.

Nancy DeCristoforo of Wilmington served as flower girl.

Frederick Sweeney of Melrose, a close friend of the groom acted as best man while ushering duties were in charge of Peter Magee of Winthrop, brother of the bride; Paul Cronin of Melrose, cousin of the groom; David Magee, of Wilmington, brother of the bride, James O'Brien of Worcester and Andrew Brickley of W. Peabody, also close friends of the groom.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held at Indian Ridge Country Club in Andover where Lucia DeCristoforo of Wilmington circulated the guest book.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Magee chose a beaded silk tea length dress in soft mauve chiffon.

The new Mrs. Cronin is a 1982 graduate of Wilmington High School currently employed as assistant for VP sales and marketing at Charrette, Woburn.

Her husband, a graduate of Melrose High School, earned a degree from ULowell in 1982 and is now employed as a sales representative by Byam Bros. Mahoney Insurance Agency in Lowell as a sales representative.

Following a honeymoon in Bermuda, the couple is now living in Chelmsford.

ROVING DAN FERULLO

Some mornings it pays not to get out of bed. This morning was one of those mornings. I knew it the instant I opened my eyes. The onset of the ragweed season had left a thin film of gunk over them, and I made the mistake of attempting to rub it and the sleep from my eyes at the same time. My eyes and eyelids, in a flash, began to itch wildly. Foolishly, I continued to rub them, all the way from the bed to the bathroom, where I stood in front of the mirror to examine my masochistic deed.

The pleasure derived from rubbing my eyes was gone: What remained were the special effects for a Stephen King horror movie. The gooey substance was mostly gone - tucked in the inner corner of my right eye remained a tiny speck of it, which I swept out immediately, but my eyelids were swelling into blotchy red orbs. At any moment I was certain they would close entirely. I touched the skin beneath my eyes: it was tender, sensitive, and at any moment the mere touch of it was going to trigger a sneezing fit.

I bemoaned the fact that the ragweed season was just beginning. It would be early October before the first frost would kill those dastardly airborne creatures. Yes, creatures. Microscopic creatures with enough intelligence to know enough to head straight for my eyes, knowing full well just how much damage and aggravation they'd cause.

I dabbed some cold water on my face, allowing the tiny puddles in the palms of my hands to linger around my eyes. The water felt soothing. Then I patted my eyes with a clean, fluffy towel, gently holding the soft fabric to my eyes long enough to wallow in its beneficial effects. I reached into the medicine cabinet, located a box of Actifed, peeled one from the foil wrapper, and with the aid of a huge gulp of water, swallowed the tiny white pill.

They'll work fine for awhile, I thought aloud. But then I'll have to switch to another drug, maybe Benadryl, otherwise the antihistamine will lose its effectiveness.

I spotted some leftover Benadryl tablets next to the Actifed box in the medicine cabinet. By the end of September, I said to the grotesque image in the mirror, you'll be at the peak of your annual late-summer, early-fall junky excursion.

It won't be until mid-October before we ragweed sufferers straighten out. By then the Red Sox will have made their usual last-minute collapse and the Patriots will be 1-4. There was so much to look forward to.

After two cups of coffee (I normally drink one each morning, but somebody told me once that caffeine can act as an antihistamine) and a glimpse at the morning news (I was also suffering from Iraqophobia, as Johnny Carson had said to describe his boredom with news about the Middle East), I showered and prepared to enjoy one of the last remaining days of my vacation.

There were, however, several small chores I had planned to get out of the way first. One of them was to plane down the upper corner of my back door. It had been sticking more and more lately, and I attributed it to the unusually long stretch of muggy weather we've been experiencing.

When I finished planing down the door, I tried closing it. The door closed smoothly; the sticking seemed to be completely gone. Then I tried locking the deadbolt lock. That's when I realized something screwy was happening: The bolt wouldn't insert into the frame of the door. I peered between the door and the frame to see where the bolt was hitting the brass-covered hole on the frame. The bolt, to my surprise, was missing the

By DOUGLAS WOOD-BOYLE

Volunteer "citizen soldiers" of the Massachusetts National Guard are involved in a war that is not being fought in some far-flung outpost such as Iraq or Saudi Arabia.

It is the war on drugs, but it is not being fought in Panama, or Nicaragua. It is being fought right here throughout the Commonwealth of Massachusetts by members of the Twenty-Sixth Infantry Division. They have been involved in it since September of 1989 and as with any war this one has its dangers. For this reason none of the spokespeople quoted in the story will be identified.

The ruling on confidentiality has come from the U.S. Department of Defense (DOD), as the result of some members of units in other states receiving threats when they were identified.

The Counter Narcotics Support Operation based out of Camp Curtis Guild in Reading, is not the first in the nation. However, to date, with just under a year of service, it has scored the biggest anti-drug operation, both in manpower and equipment, of any Guard unit in the 50 states.

That operation took place earlier this summer when 40 members of the unit (in both uniforms and civilian clothes) worked very closely with local and state police and a drug enforcement task force, to stop drug sales and effect arrests during a "Greatful Dead" rock concert at Foxboro Stadium.

A Lieutenant with the unit said, "We are the first unit to be used in conjunction with local, state police and a drug task force in hitting a rock concert."

The size of the operation used many of the wide variety of skills that can be provided by the guard. These include, surveillance techniques, helicopter surveillance and a vast communications network.

As to the unit's effectiveness, the Lieutenant said "The reports from the next two concerts held at the stadium showed that it was a deterrent because they thought we were there."

The operation also epitomized the purpose of the unit, which is to work with all local and state law enforcement and Drug Task Forces at the request of the heads of the forces.

Here then,
Here now,
Here always . . .
When you need us!

National Guard

A different kind of war that's fought near your hometown

"We only do it when we are asked," said the Lieutenant. He added, "We can't drum up our own business."

By the same token, he also explained that the volunteers are trained to have no contact with the drug dealers and users that they are watching.

"When you start making buys, you're doing what the police do," the Lieutenant said. "We keep from overlapping our duties."

He added that everytime the unit is used the person is assigned to a law enforcement officer. That officer is in charge of gathering the evidence.

According to the Lieutenant, if the Guardsman takes a picture, the film is immediately turned over to the enforcement officer. As much for confidentiality as for security reasons the volunteers are never used as witnesses in the ensuing court cases. Because of the court cases and possible continuance of the investigations, the volunteers are trained not to talk about the cases even when their work is done.

Because of the close contact with law enforcement officers, those assigned as escorts also receive training in how to work with and use the talents of their guard counterparts.

A Sergeant in charge of training for the volunteers and their law enforcement counterparts said that all the local chiefs or the District Attorneys have to do to put us in service is to pick up the telephone. "We can then provide the police with everything," he added.

The cost of the program to the local enforcement agencies is just the cost of the phone call. The spokespeople explained that the unit is completely funded through the federal government.

This fact alone can save a small town that could use the service of a helicopter in a drug surveillance operation, up to $400-per-hour.

The sergeant explained that especially due to present budget crunches "the police are hurting and they need help." He added "It has to be community help."

The Lieutenant explained that once the request for assistance is received, the units commander evaluates it and gives approval in accordance with DOD guidelines. "We don't judge the assistance on the size of the police force or their intentions," he said.

"Lately we've gotten very busy," he added.

The Lieutenant explained that the unit has several operations going on at the same time. Some of them last from a simple one-hour helicopter surveillance to seven-day operations.

In the case of the latter, the unit attempts to send in a team for about three or four days at a time, pull them and send in another.

The Sergeant explained that the Guard has well over 600 volunteers in the unit at the time. When asked if the possible call-ups for the Mid-East crisis would hurt the unit, The Lieutenant replied, "There won't be enough National Guard called out so that we can't get volunteers."

When asked why the men would volunteer for a dangerous type of work such as this, both the spokespeople admitted that in some cases egos might be involved.

However, the Lieutenant said that his reason for getting involved was to keep somebody else's family member away from the drug problems that one of his family got into.

The sergeant said that he has been with the program since its inception. "I got into it as a way to use my Army training, and the interaction with law enforcement people. I saw it as a chance to help," he said.

Many of the volunteers get to use the special skills that they learned during their tours of active duty. Because of this the group is made up of a large spectrum of people from former Army Rangers, and Navy Seals, to Medics and helicopter pilots.

The Lieutenant said "we try to match a volunteer's skills to the operations. If a man was a cavalry scout, he is used for surveillance."

As the Sergeant explained, "the federal Drug Enforcement Agency is just starting to get the same training I already have."

The group has been used everywhere in the Commonwealth from Cape Cod to the Berkshires and in large and small communities alike.

It is a descendent of the first such unit which was started under a federal mandate in the State of Hawaii to help combat the drug problem there. That unit was so successful that every state National Guard now has one.

No wonder our youngsters are confused. Half of them are told, "Find Yourself!" The other half are told to "Get Lost!" Some rules in English grammar don't help very much either - such as - it's I before E we were all told in school. BUT, that's NOT always the steadfast rule. Sometimes it's E before I after the letter C and sometimes it's not, just to confuse me. Many people are living on a "fixed" income - the income that's left after the car is fixed, or after the refrigerator, TV or washer is fixed.

The people of France loved their late former General and President so much they want to buy the Rock of Gibraltar from England and rename it "De-Gaul Stone!" I've been invited to a nudist wedding and I haven't got a thing to wear. I asked Bob Giguere if he ever was on the stage. "No," he said, "but I've had my leg in a cast." I remember when my sister, Maureen, said to me, "Chips, Brian and Dennis want to marry me. Who do you think the lucky one will be?" I answered her in all sincerity, "Brian will marry you and Dennis will be the lucky one." If you think that no one knows that you are alive - try missing a couple of car payments.

I asked the caretaker at the Museum of Fine Arts why a Mummy in the Egyptian room was isolated in a remote corner. "Oh," he replied, "that Mummy got a bum wrap! Isn't it wonderful how people who never had any children, tell others how to bring theirs up?" I remember asking my father why at the Old Howard (a burlesque show) generally all the men in the first three rows were baldheaded. My father said, "That's probably because they bought their tickets from scalpers!"

The Idaho Potato Growers convention committee voted NOT to have Walter Cronkite speak at their annual meeting because he is a "common-tater." There are two times in a man's life when he doesn't know a thing about women - before he's married and after he's married. As far as the Woodchipper is concerned, it's their unpredictability that makes them so wonderful. When I come home from work, I toss my hat in the door. If it comes flying out at me with an additional cup and saucer followed by an old shoe then I know Kathy's had a bad day.

Kathy was going to have her face lifted but it was easier to lower her body six inches. I told Mario DiMino that deep breathing kills microbes. "OK," he said, "How do I get them to breathe deeply?" Father John Crispo told the organist, "When I ask the congregation 'all those who want to contribute $100 to the building fund, stand up' play something appropriate." "What do you suggest?" Father John smiled and said, "The Star Spangled Banner!" Don Harris works for the Boston Edison. His part-time job as a bartender at the Elks helps keep the town "Half-lit!"

tongue twister, "She sells sea shells at the sea shore?" Well, try this one, "A box of biscuits, a box of mixed biscuits, and a biscuit mixer." Bobby Burns told me that he doesn't have to work because his grandfather owned a string of laundries and he left Bobby quite a bundle. An undertaker and a circus snake charmer married and their towels are marked "hiss" and "hearse." I remember Bill and Katie Matthews (my next door neighbors) who turned to the obituary page first before even reading the headlines. Bill called it the "Irish sport page."

Timmy O'Donnell, my nephew, asked his mother, "I've never seen a picture of an angel with a beard - don't men with whiskers go to Heaven?" "Yes, they do," replied my sister, Maurcen, (a red-headed spitfire) but only by a 'close shave.' The closest some people will ever get to Heaven is to join the singers up in the choir loft. After a "fire and brimstone" sermon a clergyman shouted, "All those who want to go to Heaven, stand up!" Everyone sprang up from their seats except one little old gentleman sitting in the first pew. The clergyman went to him and gently said, "Don't you want to go to Heaven when you die?" "Oh, when I die," exclaimed the much relieved old soul, "I thought you were making up a bus load now!" Kathy went to the Winn Street Plumbing and Heating Company and said, "The Woodchipper wants a 1/2 inch pipe plug." "Does he want a male plug, a female plug or one of each?" "How the heck do I know," snapped Kathy, "All I know is that he is going to try to stop a water leak. I don't think he's stupid enough to try to raise them."

The major difference between professional baseball and football is that in baseball the bases get loaded and in football some of the spectators do. Folks, Ella Wheeler Wilcox wrote these beautiful lines, "One ship drives east and another drives west with the self same wind that blows. Tis the set of the sails and not the gales which tells us the way to go." The first step in helping to make your dream come true is to "wake up." I asked Dennis Tully, "Where did Noah keep the bees?" Dennis smiled and said, "In the ark-hives!" Bob Giguere's donation to the kids neighborhood pool was an unsigned $100 check. When it was brought to his attention, bob said, "I always make my monetary gifts anonymously."

hole by at least a quarter of an inch! I wondered if perhaps my planing the wood had caused the bolt lock to be thrown out of kilter.

I tried planing the door just a little more, thinking that might help. Then I tried the bolt lock again. Still to no avail. I decided it was time to call Paul, a carpenter-friend of mine who, just a year or so ago, had done a magnificent job of remodelling the upstairs portion of my house. Paul said he was going to be in my area within a half hour, and he'd be glad to stop by to check the door out.

Paul showed up sooner than expected; he's always been that kind of guy: Whether he's doing a job for you, or just being a friend, he's always prompt.

He examined the plane job I'd performed on the corner of the door. He ran the underside of his hand over the freshly-exposed wood, then tried closing and opening the door. It seemed to be working fine.

Paul asked for the key to the bolt lock, and tried that. The bolt easily emerged from its cylinder, only to come to an abrupt halt against the brass plate on the door frame.

"I see what you mean," he said, opening the door to make a token examination of the deadbolt and the brass plate on the door frame. "Let me go out to my truck for a minute, and I'll see what I can do to fix that."

Paul returned with a hammer, a chisel and a screwdriver in his hand. He removed the brass plate and began chipping away at the wood above it. "I'll move the plate up a little bit," he said. "That'll solve the problem."

I felt a tingle in my right eye, and fought back the urge to scratch it. No matter how much it bothered me, I refused to give in to rubbing it. The Actifed had done its job, but I was reluctant to take another too soon. The medication tended to make me lethargic, and I had too many things to do that morning.

Paul finished relocating the brass plate. He closed the door and tried the bolt lock again. This time the bolt slid easily into the hole.

"All fixed," Paul said, gathering his tools and setting them to one side for the time being.

In the meantime, I had made us both a cup of coffee. I handed him his, and we stood in the kitchen, chatting and sipping our hot coffees. I was planning to have Paul return soon to begin remodelling my bathroom and basement, so we spent much of the time discussing that. At one point, I noticed Paul staring at the frame to the back door.

I ceased speaking about my remodelling plans, and asked, "Is everything all right, Paul?"

Paul continued to gaze in the direction of the door, seemingly ignoring my query. I asked him again.

Finally, he replied, "I'm not sure. Look above the door. The space above the hinge is smaller than the space at the other end."

My right eye began to tingle again. It wasn't a good sign.

"Now look at the floor," Paul said. "The floor seems to be sloping towards the door."

Paul stepped back to take in a better overall view of the area around my back door.

"Look at the ceiling," he said. "Look at the way it's sagging. You can hardly see it, but it's definitely sagging. I'd better get underneath your deck and take a look at the foundation."

I have a large wooden deck that runs from my backdoor, around the side of the house, to the back of the house. Paul removed one of the panels of wood at the base of the deck, and crawled underneath. Several minutes later he crawled back out. As he brushed off the dirt from his tee-shirt and jeans, I observed the concerned expression on his face. My right eye was actually twitching at the same time. Still, I refused to scratch it.

"You've got a problem," Paul told me. "Take a look for yourself."

We crouched down, and using an industrial-size flashlight, which he'd gotten from his truck, he pointed out certain things as he spoke. "Take a look at the support posts at the corner. They're completely gone - eaten away by termites and rotted away by water damage."

I had seen enough. We stood back up, and he continued to explain the damage. "Right now, the only thing holding up that addition is the deck. But all it would take is one good snow storm, and you could kiss that room goodbye."

"That's why the room is sagging," I said.

"And that's why you had trouble closing the back door. Not because of humidity, but because the room is sagging a little more each day."

I asked, "What's it going to take to fix this?"

Paul reluctantly explained, "I'm going to have to rip up part of the decking in the front and part of the decking in the back of the house, and then jack up the house, rip out all the old rotted posts, dig holes, pour in some cement, and construct new support posts. When I put the deck back together again, you'll never know the work was done."

The twitch in my right eye disappeared, but now my heart was throbbing like an old locomotive out of control. All I could envision was dollars - money I'd saved to remodel my bathroom and basement - floating into the air. I had the urge to cry out and sneeze at the same time. I fought back the cry, and let the sneeze go.

Paul suggested that I not put off repairing the foundation. Each day the room would sag a little further. "I definitely wouldn't let it go through the winter," he said.

We made arrangements for him to come back the following day to start the demolition. He was in the process of building a house, but he was sure the owner would excuse him for a week or so to correct this emergency.

By the time we completed the financial details, I was in a full-blown sneezing attack. "Hay fever?" Paul asked.

"Yeah," I replied, trying to ward off the attack by holding my nose. "Nerves can bring on an attack, also. I think it's nerves now."

Nerves, and dismay over ever having gotten out of bed that morning.

Grass clipping recycling is subject of national campaign

The Professional Lawn Care Association of America (PLCAA) is sponsoring a national public awareness campaign to encourage the recycling of grass clippings. The campaign, GrassCycling: grass clippings currently taking up valuable space in the nation's landfills.

GrassCycling is the natural recycling of grass clippings by simply leaving them on the lawn after mowing. The grass plant's nutrients are then recycled to the soil with the added benefit of helping lawns become healthier. Homeowners avoid the inconvenience of collecting, bagging, and disposing of clippings.

PLCAA's GrassCycling campaign includes development of a community action program designed specifically for municipal governments, cooperative extension agents, lawn care professionals, and other groups dealing with landfill problems. The program includes technical guidelines for mowing, watering, and fertilization and a public relations strategy to promote public participation and support.

The community action program is being adapted from the "Don't Bag It" plan developed in 1989 by Dr. Bill Knoop, Turfgrass Specialist at Texas A&M University. Knoop's pilot program, conducted by Fort Worth Clean Air, Inc. in Fort Worth, Texas, won the 1989 national Keep American Beautiful Award in the local government category.

"America's landfills are filling up and closing at an alarming rate," said James R. Brooks, Executive Vice President of PLCAA. "By recycling grass clippings, individual citizens can make a big difference in protecting the environment."

Grass clippings and yard debris make up 20% of the solid waste being dumped in America's landfills. GrassCycling will help landfills last longer, refuse collection will be speedier, and collection costs will be reduced.

Exercise safely during pregnancy

Expectant mothers can learn how to exercise safely during pregnancy at a six-week Fitness Through the Childbearing Year class offered by New England Memorial Hospital (NEMH), Stoneham, starting Thursday, September 13, from 7 to 8:30 p.m.

The program was developed by the NEMH Physical Therapy and OB/GYN Departments to teach mothers-to-be about essentials of safe exercise throughout pregnancy and into the post-partum months. Run by a registered physical therapist, each class will include stretching, gentle exercise, a relaxation segment and a brief lecture. This class is not a substitute for the early and natural childbirth classes offered by the hospital's Rigsby Maternity Center, but rather a complement to these programs.

Participants must pre-register for the course and have their physician's permission before beginning the program. Classes will be held in the rehabilitation gym on the subground level of the hospital. For additional information and forms, contact Nancy Spurio in the NEMH Physical Therapy Department at (617) 979-7125.

Classes for youngsters include creative play (for children ages 5 to 7), arts, crafts and photography (ages 6 to 12), introduction to computers (ages 8 to 12), and academic enrichment in math or English (ages 10 to 13). Each class meets Saturdays from September 15 to December 8, from 9:30 to noon. The fee for 12 weeks is $145.

The "Kids on Campus" program was established in response to questionnaires sent to several hundred part-time adult students. Respondents indicated great enthusiasm for Saturday morning recreation/education sessions for their children.

For more information on "Kids on Campus," call Dorothy Gibbons at Bentley's School of Continuing and Professional Studies at (617) 891-2800.

—The oldest such event in New England, Woburn High's public speaking contest once again enhanced an all-school annual evening of fine arts, proceeds from which keep the Woburn High Scholarship Fund growing.

Coordinated by English department and evening chair A. John Flaherty, the 76th consecutive public speaking contest included prizes donated by the Woburn Woman's Club.

Designed to "recognize the truth and beauty inherent in individual expression," the 7th annual fine arts evening encompassed extensive displays of paintings, drawings, prints, crafts, sculpture, and jewelry, including art work from both middle schools as well as song and music provided by the Concert Choir and Woburn High Jazz Ensemble.

Student speakers included last year's public speaking contest co-winner Alan Burnce, Brian Moden, Jennifer Kent, Andrew Weiss, and Michael Meehan.

Judges were former Woburn School Committee member Dr. Edward Donohoe, Woburn Public Library Director Kathleen O'Doherty and Winchester High English Chair Scott Webber.

In addition to Flaherty, faculty advisers included Choral Music Director Robert Hodgson, Jazz Ensemble Director Edward Doughty, Art Department Chair Frank Newark, Jeannette Lawnicki (program), and Ellie Zenis (cover design).

"Wild at Heart" Starring Laura Dern, Nicolas Cage, Diane Ladd. Directed and written by David Lynch. Rated R.

It would be kind of hard not to be disappointed, what with all the ink used recently to laud writer/director David Lynch. But "Wild at Heart" just didn't get under my skin and prickly my psyche in the manner of "Blue Velvet" or "Twin Peaks."

This is a case of too much. There is no slow paring down of the story to its rotten core, as is true of "Blue Velvet" and to a lesser degree with "Twin Peaks." This time all that is strange is clearly displayed on the screen. The result isn't so much disturbing as it is campy. Lynch would have us believe that his tale of two lovers on the lam in the deep South is a cracked version of the "Wizard of Oz." It's more like the caricature of that fairy tale.

Laura Dern is Lula, a Southern Dorothy looking for a good time on her way over the rainbow. Nicolas Cage is Sailor, her wild lover who decides they both need to get away from the Wicked Witch of the West - Lula's mother. So off they go across the South, he breaking parole, she arousing a wild rage in Mama, who promptly puts out a contract on Sailor.

Although Diane Ladd fairly chews up the scenery as Mama, the rest of the cast offers some pleasant surprises. Dern is startlingly sensual as Lula, a young woman whose naivete is buried under the lush sexiness of skimpy lingerie and red lipstick. When she tells Cage he's got her "hotter'n Georgia asphalt," you know she means it. Cage, in turn, is strong and funny, with Elvis-like accent and macho mannerisms barely covering a true heart beating in Lula's direction. Even the supporting cast is superb, with Willem Dafoe a standout as a creepy two-bit hood who practically slithers across the stage. And Lynch fans will chuckle when they get an eyeful of the Gilda, the Good Witch.

Unfortunately, the cast is better than the plot, which is just so out there. "Wild at Heart" is more stupid and strange than weird and wonderful. In "Blue Velvet" you really had to stare at that ear lying in the grass. You almost couldn't believe what you were seeing. In "Wild at Heart," there is no subtlety to a dog running off with a severed hand.

Part of the problem, of course, is that those of us who love Lynch's work expect more from him. The other part of that problem is that he really does have more to offer.

"The Exorcist III" Starring George C. Scott, Ed Flanders, Brad Dourif. Written and directed by William Peter Blatty. Produced by Carter Dehaven. Based on Blatty's novel "Legion." Rated R.

There's little point in beating around the bush, so let's just cut through all possible shades of gray: "The Exorcist III" is a truly lousy flick.

It's a crummy movie all on its own, but appears even worse when compared to the original flick. It doesn't even stand up to "The Exorcist's" bland sequel.

Writer/director William Peter Blatty openly advertised this atrocity as his baby, just so we wouldn't confuse it with "The Exorcist II: The Heretic," which he did not write and had nothing to do with. Yeah, "The Exorcist II" was a pretty silly piece of work, but Blatty didn't do himself any favor by trying to distance himself from it. His tale of possession is just as preposterous.

Someone is terrorizing the residents of Georgetown, or so we're told. All the murders, and much of the story, is never really played out. One character fills in another, and us along the way, making this the most boring horror flick you may ever sit through. Granted, the blatant violence of an exploitation movie is generally pretty tasteless and unwarranted. However, there's nothing very scary about a bunch of actors talking at us.

George C. Scott plays a cop who discovers that the spirit of an electrocuted serial killer is still alive, and kicking, in the body of Father Damien Karras (Jason Miller) the priest killed at the end of "The Exorcist." About half-way through the flick, Miller turns into actor Brad Dourif. Eventually we're shown a picture of the serial killer and realize he's the bad apple Dourif is playing, but no explanation is given for the physical transformation.

With the exception of Dourif, the acting ranges from mediocre to terrible. Scott, more over the top than usual, grates from his first utterance to his last. The special effects, featuring a lot of fake snakes, are laughable. The plot meanders and waffles, never giving us anyone to cheer on or fear.

Blatty lacks the range and expertise of William Friedkin, whose fiendish tricks truly frightened audiences all over the world with "The Exorcist." Of course, Blatty's original novel and screenplay gave Friedkin strong stuff with which to work. This flick merely displays a devilish case of frivolity. Save yourself some aggravation and stay home.

Innovative management systems course at Northern Essex

Northern Essex Community College in Haverhill will be one of the first colleges in the country to have a degree option in Total Quality Management (TQM), an innovative system of management which emphasizes customer service and employee input, in the fall.

The college will be offering a certificate program in TQM and a Business Management Associate Degree with a TQM Option. Both programs are designed for students who are currently employed in manufacturing or service industries or have had some exposure to business in the past. Courses will be available during the evenings, as part of the Saturday morning Weekend College, and on-site at company locations in the region.

Northern Essex has been providing courses and workshops in TQM for over three years through its Center for Business and Industry. A recent workshop, the Second Annual Total Quality Management Showcase Day, attracted over 250 participants from 70 organizations, an indication of the strong local interest in TQM, according to John R. Dimitry, president of Northern Essex.

"The Japanese have been successfully using TQM management for over 25 years," said Dimitry. "More and more local companies are beginning to realize that they can increase productivity, decrease waste, and improve customer satisfaction by adopting the TQM management style. Because of this interest and the success of our earlier TQM programs, the college decided to introduce TQM degree options."

Developed by W. Edwards Deming, TQM is an integrated management process which emphasizes customer service, work force empowerment, and continuous improvement to achieve productivity and satisfaction, and competitiveness. The principles of TQM can be applied to any business, large or small, whether service or manufacturing oriented.

For more information on certificate and associate degree programs in Total Quality Management, please contact Mel Silberberg, director, Northern Essex, Center for Business and Industry, or Susan Ziemba, curriculum specialist, Northern Essex, Center for Business and Industry, (508) 374-3816.

Make it a safe boating weekend

Millions of Americans will take to the nation's waterways this Labor Day weekend - the traditional last big weekend of summer - in nearly 16 million power, sail and row boats, canoes and "jet skis." Unfortunately, as many as 26 Americans may also die in boating accidents.

Recreational boating fatalities are currently the third largest category of transportation-related deaths in the nation (behind automobiles and airplanes). During 1989, 896 Americans were killed in boating accidents. According to US Coast Guard statistics compiled over an 18-year period (1969-87), the Labor Day death toll in 73% higher than the average number of boating fatalities reported to the Coast Guard for non-holiday weekends in September over the same period.

The most common types of boating accidents are colliding with another boat or an object in the water, capsizing, fire or explosion, passenger falling overboard or grounding.

The most frequent, non-alcohol-related error cited in Coast Guard reports is "improper lookout," which literally means that the boat operator wasn't looking where he was going. Speeding and navigational errors are also frequently mentioned.

If you're planning to go boating this Labor Day weekend, BOAT/U.S. suggests that at the very least, you should keep in mind these simple rules:

- Know before you go - get a weather forecast. The prudent mariner would not go without one. While underway, observe current conditions and be aware of changing weather patterns. Conditions on the water can change quickly.
- Treat your life jackets as if your life depends on it. Four out of every five people who die in boating accidents aren't wearing their life jackets.

- Keep a sharp lookout. Most accidents are collisions. Avoid close encounters with other boats or objects in the water, swimmers or skiers.

- Don't overload your boat, with people or equipment. And make sure that you have all Coast Guard required equipment on board.

- Alcohol and boating do not mix. Never let an intoxicated or impaired person take the helm.

Free boat handling and safety courses are offered nationwide by the Coast Guard Auxiliary and the US Power Squadrons. For the location of the course nearest you, call the BOAT/U.S. Counselor, 1-800-336-BOAT. For a free packet of boating safety information, write "Boater's Six Pack," BOAT/U.S. Foundation, 880 S. Pickett Street, Alexandria, VA 22304.

Stop smoking & stress management at NEMH

If you are interested in reducing stress or joining the growing number of people who are trading in their cigarettes for a healthier lifestyle, New England Memorial Hospital (NEMH) can help. The Stoneham hospital is offering two lifestyle-improvement programs this fall to assist you in achieving your goals.

"Breathe Free" is a smoking-cessation program designed to help smokers get through the difficult withdrawal process and successfully stop smoking. Taught by a multidisciplinary group of health-care professionals, the program includes an introductory session, a five-day cessation period and follow-up sessions. The program runs from September 13 to October 2, meeting from 7 to 9 p.m. The next quit night in September 18.

"Stress Management I" teaches the skills you need to reduce the harmful effects of stress on your body, mind and relationships with family, friends and co-workers. The eight-week program meets on Wednesdays from 6 to 8 p.m., beginning September 12.

For more information, or to register for these programs, call the NEMH Center for Health Promotion at (617) 979-7057.

Vintage car racing at Lime Rock

Join the Museum of Transportation for a day at the races on Labor Day weekend. On Monday, September 3, transport the family to Lime Rock Race Track in Connecticut for a fun-filled day of vintage racing and exhibition events at the BMW Vintage Fall Festival. The Museum is offering a special package plan that includes a VIP pass to Lime Rock Park, access to the Autojumble (swap meet), exclusive use of the Kendall Hospitality Building, a spectacular view of the start-finish line and field activities from the building's upperdeck, and a luncheon buffet with soft drinks and cash bar. The Museum is also providing a charter flight that leaves from Hanscom Field in Bedford at 9 a.m. Bus transportation from the Connecticut airport whisks passengers to and from Lime Rock Park. For those planning to drive the scenic route, stop by Collin's Diner (Route 44, North Canaan). A nostalgic glimpse of roadside architecture, Collin's is one of the last remaining original diners in New England.

Lime Rock Park race track is the oldest, continuously-operated road racing circuit in the United States. On September 3, the festival recreates the historic 1970 Trans Am won by Parnelli Jones after a thrilling four-abreast start. Many of the original drivers and cars - such as Mustangs, Camaros, a Challenger, a Cuda, and more - that competed in that race, are expected to attend the 1970 Trans Am reunion. Parnelli Jones serves as Grand Marshal of this year's BMW Vintage Fall Festival although he will not be re-enacting his historic start. At the Autojumble, spectators can browse through photos, paintings, books, videos, posters, programs, automobiles, a car coral area and a comprehensive assortment of new and used parts for older sports cars. The Auto Art Show, held four miles west of the track at the Interlaken Inn, features works by Thierry Thompson who created the festival poster.

Fat kids can be fit kids

Children returning to school this September are part of a generation that is fatter and less fit than students were 25 years ago. A recent survey showed that as many as 40% of five to eight year olds are obese, with half of these children already showing three or more risk factors for heart disease, stroke and cancer.

Yet there is hope according to Lawrence Stifler, Ph.D., president of Health Management Resources (HMR), a national lifestyle health company specializing in obesity treatment programs. He states that, "Although today's children have the potential to become the most obese adults in history, we as parents can reverse this unhealthy trend by taking some positive and immediate steps." He adds that, "If we start now and teach our children healthier eating habits and the importance of physical activity, they will most likely continue to make positive health choices into their future."

Dr. Stifler adds that there are some easy steps a parent can take to improve their children's health. One of the simplest is to make some substitutions in a youngster's lunchbox:

dren help to choose foods, they will be more likely to eat them.

- Encourage your children to play outside after school. The average child spends more time watching television than attending school. In fact, research has shown that excessive television viewing is linked directly to childhood obesity. (One study showed that every hour spent watching TV translates into a 2% increase in the prevalence of obesity.)

- Make some simple diet changes, like substituting two pieces of fruit twice a week instead of cookies as a snack. If your child eats an apple and a banana instead of four ounces of cookies twice a week, he/she will lose eight to ten pounds a year.

- Spend active time with your

HIGH FAT	LOWER FAT	SAVINGS
Bologna sandwich with mustard 410 calories	Bologna sandwich with mustard 325 calories	SAVES 85 calories!
Potato chips 1 ounce bag 150 calories	Air poppot popcorn 3 cups 75 calories	SAVES 75 calories!
Cookies 3 ounce package 375 calories	Grapes 3 ounces 100 calories	SAVES 275 calories!
Whole milk 1 cup 160 calories	Skim milk 1 cup 70 calories	SAVES 90 calories!
TOTAL CALORIES 1,095	TOTAL CALORIES 570	TOTAL SAVINGS 525 calories!

The difference between eating these two lunches during the course of the school year translates into 28 pounds a child would either lose or not gain. Equally important, the lower fat lunch is more nutritious overall.

HMR offers the following additional suggestions to parents who want to make a difference in their children's health:

- Take your children grocery shopping and let them pick out vegetables and fruits. When chilchildren - walking and riding bikes. Build physical activities into family trips; walk to the video store, the ice cream shop, or around the neighborhood after dinner.

"We need to work with our nation's children today if we hope to have an effect on the health of the next generation," says Stifler. "We must do something now or we'll pay dearly, both in terms of dollars and lives, for our inattention to our children."

We've changed and we're ready for you.

Where we stand on weight control:

- QUICK FIXES DON'T WORK.
- COUNT NUTRIENTS INSTEAD OF CALORIES.
- ANYTHING THAT REMOVES RESPONSIBILITY FROM THE INDIVIDUAL UNDERMINES SUCCESS.
- LOSING WEIGHT IS EASIER THAN MAINTAINING WEIGHT.

What's Doing

—An Arts & Entertainment Update—

BREAD AND ROSES LABOR DAY HERITAGE FESTIVAL

On Labor Day, September 3, from 2:15 to 9 p.m., the Bread and Roses Heritage Committee will present its 6th annual Labor Day Heritage Festival, featuring numerous events, all free to the public. The event is held at Pemberton Park, Lawrence, (off Canal and Amesbury streets, Lawrence) Lawrence Heritage Park Visitor's Center (Jackson and Canal streets, Lawrence).

The day begins shortly after noon at Lawrence's Heritage Park Visitors Center with a "living history" walking tour of Lawrence's mill district, the site of the 1912 "Bread and Roses" strike where textile workers from many nations, speaking many languages fought for and won better wages and working conditions.

The centerpiece of the festival, a concert on the banks of the Merrimack River, begins at 2:15 p.m. Headliners include nationally-renowned Cajun band Beausoleil, Massachusetts folk legend Livingston Taylor, and singer-songwriter Sally Rogers. Other performers include: Lawrence native Carlos Dipre and his orchestra, presenting Latin American dance music; Jah Spirit bringing their unique blend of African, Calypso and Reggae beats to the festival; The Pipettes, musician/organizers from the Harvard Union of Clerical and Technical Workers performing traditional and contemporary labor music; Barbara Lee Supino, singer and songwriter performing original folk and women's music; and, Russian emigre Peter Zaitsev, playing traditional and classical music on the Balalaika.

International dance workshops featuring Beausoleil and others will give festival-goers a chance to watch and learn dance styles from around the world. A Textile Arts Fair at the park will feature demonstrations and participatory workshops on weaving, spinning, and dyeing, as well as live sheep to see and pet.

Storytelling, face painting, clowns, and other children's activities will take place throughout the afternoon. The Immigrant City Archives, the City's historical society, will present an exhibit of art inspired by Lawrence, and local ethnic organizations and others will provide a variety of international food.

Fireworks over the Merrimack river will bring the evening to a close. For more information, contact the Bread and Roses Heritage Committee at (508) 682-1863.

THE RUSSIANS ARE COMING TO LOWELL SEPT. 5

The same people who brought you the 1990 Lowell Folk Festival are bringing an evening of Russian entertainment to Lowell on Wednesday, September 5 at 7:30 p.m. at the Smith Baker Center, 400 Merrimack Street, Lowell. Tickets are $12, and are available from Ticketron, the Lowell National and State Parks Visitor Center, and at Minute Man National Historical Park at the Battle Road Visitor Center in Lexington, and the North Bridge Visitor Center in Concord.

"Voices of the Soviet Union," an exciting evening of entertainment with artists from Russia on their first trip to the United States, will explore a portion of the music and art that has grown in the Soviet Union. Americans tend to think of the Soviet Union as one country, with one population and culture.

"Oleg Ochurovich Kuular," is a throat singer from the Tuvan Republic. He has mastered four styles of throat singing, all using overtones to produce the sound of more than one note at once. Kuular, who learned the method in his childhood, is presently teaching his son to carry on in the family tradition.

The Voice of the Soviet Union is sponsored by the National Council for the Traditional Arts, Lowell National Historical Park, the Lowell Historic Preservation Commission, and the Regatta Festival Committee.
